From 1954 through 1964, the ACC Tournament was held to determine singles and doubles champions only, while the team champion was determined in regular-season competition. From 1965 through 1989, the ACC Tournament determined both the singles, doubles and team champions. Beginning in 1990, the tournament determined the ACC team champion while the singles and doubles champions were determined in regular-season play.

Notes: • From 1954 to 1964, the champion was determined by regular-season dual-match play. • From 1965 to 1982, the conference champion was determined solely on the basis of a post-season tournament with points awarded based on individual play. • From 1983 to 1985, the conference champion was based on points awarded both for regular-season and tournament play. The regular season results accounted for approximately 40 percent of the total and the tournament, the remaining 60 percent. • From 1986 to 1989, the conference champion was determined by a three-day single-elimination dual match tournament with a playback to determine places one through eight. • Since 1990 the conference champion has been determined by a single-elimination dual match tournament with no playback. • Since 1994, the tournament implemented the format of playing three doubles matches of pro-set length (8 games) with the team winning two of the sets receiving one point for the team match prior to playing six singles matches with the team scoring four points to be the team winner.

Notes: Up until 1977, the NCAA champion was decided by the total of the individual scoring of all players on each team. One point was awarded for each match won, including singles and doubles. A single elimination tournament featuring 16 teams began in 1977 and has since expanded to 32.
