Head Coach
Chuck Barbee

Luke Calvert
NCAA Qualifier

Phillip Simpson
Two-Time All-American
Entering his fifth year as head coach, Chuck Barbee has helped push Army’s wrestling program back into the national spotlight. Barbee, who began his tenure at West Point in 2000, was brought in to restore the prominence of the wrestling team by developing All-American talent. Barbee got off to a strong start in his first season by guiding Maurice Worthy to an EIWA championship and an appearance at the NCAA Tournament in St. Louis, Mo. Worthy’s successful season ended after finishing as the national runner-up at 174 pounds, becoming the Black Knights’ first All-America wrestler in 14 years.

In 2001-02, Barbee’s resume of success stories was lengthened by the addition of Phillip Simpson. Despite being a highly touted rookie, Simpson could never have been expected to produce the amazing season that he did. Under the tutelage of Barbee, Simpson qualified for the NCAA Tournament after completing his plebe year with 37 wins (20 by pinfall). Simpson would finish just one win short of All-America recognition.

Boosted by the performances of Simpson, Jeremy Conner and John Paxton, the wrestling team enjoyed one of its best seasons, finishing with an 8-8 dual-match record.

Never one to reject a challenge, Barbee loaded the 2001-02 season with a number of nationally-recognized opponents such as Penn State, North Carolina, Hofstra and Lehigh. The Black Knights stayed competitive throughout the season and even pulled an upset over the No. 19 Wisconsin Badgers, 27-9.

The following year, Simpson returned to the NCAA Tournament, improving enough to take third in the 141-pound weight class. His third-place showing locked up his first All-America nod. The sophomore was joined by teammates Bernard Gardner and John Paxton in Kansas City. Barbee has led five different Black Knight wrestlers to four NCAA Tournament appearances during his four-year tenure at the helm.

In 2003-04, Simpson became Army’s first two-time All-American since Bob Robbins, capturing the honors at the 157-pound weight class. Sophomore Luke Calvert also qualified for the NCAA Championships. The team finished 7-7 in dual matches.

Barbee continues to schedule some of the best teams in the country. This season, Army is slated to face Oklahoma, Michigan and Hofstra, along with the challenging EIWA schedule, which includes Lehigh.

Before Barbee began his tenure at the United States Military Academy, he served as the head assistant at the University of Oklahoma. From 1997-2000, Barbee coached under the tutelage of former Army assistant and Big 12 “Coach of the Year” Jack Spates. Spates was an assistant coach at the Academy when the 1986-87 squad won the only EIWA championship in Army wrestling history.

Barbee coached seven All-Americans and four national finalists during his tenure at Oklahoma, helping the Sooners build one of the country’s top wrestling programs. He has coached nearly 30 national qualifiers in the last six years and was also partly responsible for helping bring in a Top 10 recruiting class in each of his three years with the Sooners. Keeping Oklahoma among the elite. The Sooners placed 10th, sixth and fourth at the NCAA Championships during Barbee’s stay on the coaching staff.

Aside from his coaching experience at OU, Barbee served as the head coach of the 1999 Big 12 All-Star team versus Korea. He was also the Sunkist Kids freestyle coach at the 2000 Olympic Trials and coach for the Team Excel Freestyle Club from 1997 through 1999.

A 1993 graduate of Oklahoma State University, Barbee was a three-time NCAA All-American for coach Joe Seay. He was a prominent contributor in leading the Cowboys to successive national titles in 1989 and 1990. He was also a two-time Academic All-American. A Big Eight Champion in 1991 and Espoir and University National Freestyle Champion. Barbee was a member of the Espoir World Cup team in 1988 and was a Junior National Freestyle All-American. During Barbee’s competitive career, he trained with wrestling legends John Smith, Kendall Cross, Alan Fried, Pat Smith and Kenny Monday.

As Army continues its return to national glory Barbee will be leading the way. He is a master technician and a tremendous motivator who the wrestlers like. As Barbee integrates gifted athletes into the West Point pipeline, the tradition of Army wrestling is certain to prosper.

Barbee and his wife Sally live in Cornwall, N.Y., with their four children: Alexa 12; Grace 7; Liza 5 and Tony 3.

Mike Clayton File

First Season • Navy '95

Mike Clayton, a four-time letterwinner at Navy, was most recently the head wrestling coach at the Newport News Apprentice School in Newport News, Va. During his five years at the helm of the Builders, Clayton mentored 30 National Collegiate Wrestling Association (NCWA) All-Americans and eight national champions. He also increased the team size from eight wrestlers upon his arrival in 1999 to 30 in 2003 by developing a national recruiting base. Clayton’s 2003-04 roster featured athletes from 14 different states.

For the final three years of his tenure at the Apprentice School, Clayton doubled as an academic instructor and taught Business Operations/Leadership, Ship Construction and Microsoft Office courses. One of his major accomplishments as an instructor was developing a partnership with the U.S. Naval Academy’s leadership department as part of his business operations course.

Immediately following his graduation from Navy in 1995, Clayton, a Lieutenant in the U.S. Navy Supply Corps, was named an assistant wrestling coach for the Midshipmen and served in that role for five months before heading to Athens, Ga., to complete the 27-week Navy Supply Corps Officers Basic Qualification School. While there, Clayton earned a spot on the All-Navy wrestling team, capturing a silver medal at the 1996 Armed Forces Championships and placing fourth at the Chattanooga, Tenn., Olympic Regionals.

Clayton is single and currently resides in Cornwall on Hudson, N.Y.

What The Wrestlers Say About Army Wrestling...

- Patrick Simpson ‘06

  "The discipline that we learn from this school and environment, we take to the mat, and the discipline that we learn from the mat, we take back to the environment. Everyday we learn more and more about what it is to be a leader, not only at school, but on the mat."

- James Hollis ‘06

  "I love how West Point challenges you everyday to be your very best, whether that is in academics or militarily, or in the wrestling room."

- Tye Reedy ‘05

  "Coach Barbee elevated our program to a high level, and will only continue to elevate the program to the top of collegiate wrestling. Coach Barbee is committed to producing the very best young men this country has to offer on and off the mat."

- Luke Calvert ‘06

  "For me, wrestling is an opportunity to be part of something great at West Point. The bonds between teammates are some of the strongest I’ve seen. As a team, we suffer and persevere in the practice room so that we can experience victory together."

- Frank Baughan ‘07

  "It takes great determination to wrestle at West Point. To truly become a part of the team, you have to develop friendships and show loyalty."
Bill Maldonado

First Season • Iowa State ’02

Bill Maldonado comes to West Point after spending the last six years in Ames, Iowa, at Iowa State. A 2002 NCAA All-American, he earned a bachelor’s degree in Spanish in 2002 and was awarded a master’s degree in education in 2004.

During his undergraduate days, Maldonado led the Cyclones to a pair of NCAA runner-up finishes and earned All-America honors following a sixth-place finish at 149 pounds at the NCAA Championships in Albany, N.Y., as a senior. Additionally, Maldonado was team captain his final season. He was a four-time NCAA Qualifier during his college career, which included a year at Georgia State.

Since graduating in 2002, Maldonado has been the head coach of the Cyclone Wrestling Club. The squad is Iowa State’s freestyle wrestling team that prepares wrestlers for the Olympic Games. Cael Sanderson, who wrestled for Iowa State and is the only undefeated four-time NCAA champion, was a member of the Cyclone Wrestling Club.

While working on his master’s degree, Maldonado also spent time as a graduate assistant Strength and Conditioning coach, along with working in the Minority Student Affairs Office as a graduate assistant.

Maldonado and his wife, Sandra, currently reside in New Windsor, N.Y.

Mike Clayton, Chuck Barbee, Bill Maldonado
Junior Andy Henry, returns as the early favorite to start in the 125-pound weight class.

An EIWA placerwinner at 125 pounds last season, Henry started the majority of the matches. Army head coach Chuck Barbee expects big things from Henry.

"If he trains right, gets his weight down and stays focused, he could be wrestling at the NCAA Tournament this year," says Barbee.

Henry, last year’s “Most Improved” award winner, will see some stiff competition in ranking matches. A pair of freshmen, Fernando Martinez and Travis Featherstone, should push him in the preseason.

Martinez was an Indiana state champion in 2003, while Featherstone was a two-time state qualifier in California. Both are tough athletes, who will make Henry work hard in pre-season workouts.

Sophomores Thang Tran and Brad Ortman should contribute depth to the 125-weight class and help make it one of the strengths of this year’s squad.

Coach Barbee envisions a strong and healthy competition for the starting job at 133 pounds. Junior Tony Severo, a back up to last season’s team captain Bernard Gardner, returns and is expected to be one of the top challengers to replace the two-time EIWA placerwinner.

Severo went 7-3 overall last year, serving as Gardner’s backup. The experience that he gained in 2003 will help his development process as he strives to make the leap into the starting rotation.

Joining Severo in the hunt to start in the 133-pound weight class is sophomore Frank Baughan. Baughan was last year’s Crum Memorial Award winner as the most courageous freshman. In addition to battling Severo, the North Potomac, Md., native will have to adjust to a new weight class this season. Last year, Baughan wrestled at 125 pounds, where he went 5-5 in 2003.

Barbee is confident that whoever emerges from this competition will be up to the task of replacing Gardner, who was 25-11 last season.

"I think that whoever comes out on top in that ranking match is going to be a pretty tough competitor for us."

There are several up-and-coming wrestlers who will help add depth to this unit. Sophomore Michael Tatz, who did not appear in any matches as a freshman, is one of the athletes that has impressed Barbee.

Senior Phillip Simpson, an NCAA All-America in the 157-pound weight class last season, is dropping down to 149 pounds this year. The move makes him the unquestioned starter at the weight class.

Simpson, a two-time All-American, is closing in on many of Army’s all-time records. His 31-6 mark last year boosted his career total to 105 victories, just 22 shy of becoming the Academy’s career leader.

With the elder Simpson brother, the 149-pound weight class is shaping up to be one of Army’s biggest strengths.

“We have high expectations for Phillip as a returning All-American," says Barbee. "His goal is to become a national champion. After what he has shown the past two years, we think that is a very realistic goal and we want to push him to reach that goal."

Senior T.J. Tepley, one of this year’s co-captains, should be geared for his best year at West Point. The Ohio native went 6-3 at 149-pound weight class last season, has dropped down to the 149-pound weight class.

Freshman Brandon Benson and junior Jon Anderson have the inside track after looking strong during the pre-season. Barbee figures that one of the two will emerge in the starter’s role.

Benson, a two-time Oklahoma state champion, has shown his talent in early season workouts.

Anderson, who wrestled in the 125-pound weight class two years ago as a plebe, has worked his way up to the 157-pound division, and has looked impressive, as well.

“Benson and Anderson are two of the guys who I expect to challenge for the starter’s spot, depending on whether or not Simpson is there or not,” remarks Barbee.

Junior Chad Marzec appears to be the early favorite in the 165-pound weight class. A two-year veteran, Marzec put together a solid 4-3 mark last season, wrestling behind Kurt Pryor, who graduated last May.

“Chad has been an off and on starter for us each of the past two seasons,” notes Barbee. “He needs to turn the corner for us this year and become a national qualifier.”

Marzec, who lost multiple overtime ranking matches to Pryor, has good wrestling experience and should be ready to make the jump to being a full-time starter.

He will be tested mostly by senior Doug Reynolds and sophomore Stephen Anastasia.

Reynolds has seen limited duty through-
Season Outlook

Luke Calvert

out his first three seasons at Army. The Huntsville, Ala., native went 2-7 last season and sports a career mark of 4-12.

Anastasia, meanwhile, did not appear in any matches last year as a plebe. He has demonstrated flashes of strong potential and is poised to compete for a starting spot.

Should Marzec slip from his spot at the top of the depth chart, both Reynolds and Anastasia are capable reserves.

Junior Gabriel Lucero returns to Army for his third year and is the preliminary favorite to retain his hold on the starter’s position in the 174-pound weight class.

“Gabriel wrestled well last year, and we are looking for even bigger things out of him this season,” explains Barbee.

For Lucero to retain the top spot in this division, he will have to hold off a plethora of challengers.

Freshman Scott Ferguson, who spent last year at USMAPS, has impressed Barbee.

“Ferguson had an outstanding year at the prep school,” remarks Barbee. “He is a very developed young man, and we think that he will come in and be very competitive within a couple of months.”

Sophomores Chris McElrath and Brent Smith are also in the mix to claim the starting spot at 174 pounds.

McElrath authored an 0-2 record in limited action last season, while Smith posted a 2-2 mark. Both have matured and grown over the offseason, and should be on the verge of making an impact on the Army program.

“McElrath and Smith are dark horses in there right now, but I think they both have the talent to challenge Ferguson,” says Barbee.

Junior Luke Calvert, an NCAA qualifier in the 184-pound weight class last season, is the clear favorite to reclaim the starting position in 2004-05.

Coming off of a 24-10 campaign that culminated in qualifying for the NCAA Championships, Calvert, a big and powerful wrestler, is poised for an even better year.

“One of our goals is to see Luke become an NCAA champion,” says Barbee. “We want to see him standing on the podium at the end of the year. Based on what he demonstrated last season, I really think the sky is the limit for Luke.”

In order to retain his hold on the starting position, Calvert will have to hold off a number of challengers.

Juniors Charles Martin and Jason Norwood along with freshman Brent Nowak are all expected to push Calvert.

“I think we have good dept at 184,” remarks Barbee. “I am confident that Charles, Jason and Brent will all compete well when called upon.”

197

The 197-pound weight class is up for grabs, according to Barbee. Junior Todd Wisman, who came on strong at the end of last season, could be considered the slight favorite, but it really is an open race.

Sophomore Connor Sanders and senior Tye Reedy are another couple of strong challengers.

Sanders wrestled at 174 pounds last season and is making the move up a couple of weight classes.

Reedy is a solid veteran who has developed with each year at the Academy.

Freshmen Travis Young and Chad Plaisted are also expected to step into the competition.

Young is coming off of a strong year at USMAPS, where he posted a 17-5 record. Plaisted, meanwhile, was an Oregon state qualifier in 2003.

“It is really wide open, and I am excited to see who is going to step up and seize the starting role,” says Barbee. “They have all shown flashes during the preseason workouts, and I think we will be in good shape at 197, no matter who emerges from the pack.”

Heavyweight

Senior Joe Forsman is the early favorite to get the lead role in the heavyweight class. After starting for two seasons at 197 pounds, Forsman bulked up and is ready to make the transition.

“We all think that Joe can become a darn good heavyweight for us,” says Barbee. “He has been working hard over the offseason, and we are all expecting big things out of him.”

Junior James Hollis, who has been a spot starter for Army the past couple of years, will be in the mix as well. Hollis won the Greco-Roman wrestling event this summer at the Pan American Junior Championships.

“James wrestled well this summer,” says Barbee. “He will be right there competing with Joe all year long.”

Freshmen Nathan Thobaben, Raffi Mnatzakanian and Scott Clark are talented plebes whom Barbee thinks could surprise some people this year.

Overview

With several returning starters, including an NCAA All-American in Phillip Simpson and another NCAA qualifier in Calvert, the outlook is promising for Army wrestling in 2004-05.

The schedule, which includes dual matches with several team ranked in the preseason top 25, will help the squad prepare itself for postseason competitions.

The non-conference slate includes duals against powerhouse schools such as Michigan and Oklahoma, while the EIWA docket features perennial power Lehigh.

“We are a solid dual meet team, but we need guys to step up another notch to become a good tournament team,” explains Barbee.

Barbee’s goals include beating Navy, performing well at the EIWA Championships and advancing as many wrestlers as possible to the NCAA Championships.
