

TITANS IN THE NBA

Cal State Fullerton has been well represented at the professional level despite the relative youth of the intercollegiate basketball program. A dozen Titans have been drafted in the past three decades and several more players have signed as free agents with the National Basketball Association.

Bobby Brown is the eleventh and latest former Titan to pick up an NBA paycheck, having signed a two-year guaranteed contract for 2008-09 and 2009-10 with the Sacramento Kings. He went undrafted in 2007 but then spent a productive season in Germany before outplaying more heralded players in Summer camp in 2008 for New Orleans, to whom he was traded by Minnesota in the off season. He finished the season with the Clippers.

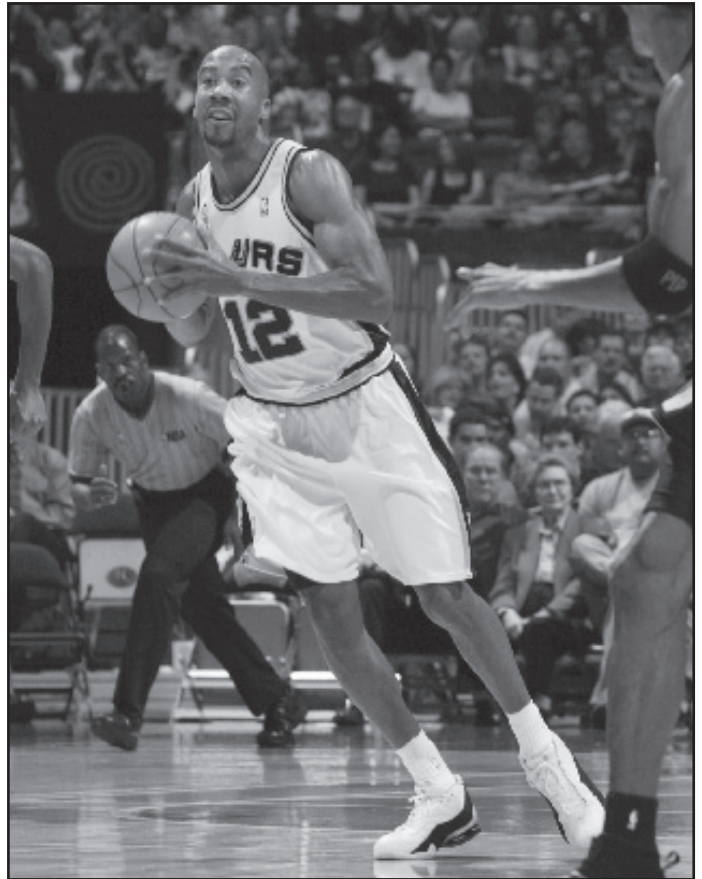

Former teammate Pape Sow preceded Brown into the NBA. Drafted in June of 2004 by Miami in the second round, he was traded the same day to Toronto and made the Raptors' opening roster for the 2004-05 season. He played in 27 games and earned a 2-year contract through the 2006-07 season. He averaged 3.5 points and 3.5 rebounds in 42 games in 2005-06 but missed most of 2006-07 after suffering a fractured vertebrae.

The most prominent former Titan was late bloomer Bruce Bowen, whose professional career was a model for perseverance and determination. Signed originally as a free agent by Cleveland in 1995, he spent a couple of years in Europe (Evreux, France, where he averaged 29 points per game), played in the CBA and was waived and resigned numerous times by several teams while crossing paths with numerous legendary coaches. He first captured the attention of Pat Riley with the Miami Heat in 1996-97, where he played in only one game before moving on to Boston. There he appeared in 91 games during the 1997-98 and 1998-99 seasons for Rick Pitino, serving primarily as a defensive specialist and playing less than 10 minutes per game. He was well traveled during the 1999-2000 season -- signed by Philadelphia, traded to Chicago, waived two days later and signed by Miami again where he was reunited with Riley. He became a starter during the 2000-01 season and averaged 7.2 points in 82 games before signing a free-agent contract for 2001-02 with the San Antonio Spurs. That year he started every game (59) except for the seven weeks he missed with a broken finger on his right hand. Not coincidentally, the Spurs went only 11-12 in his absence.

The Spurs got knocked out of the playoffs by the Los Angeles Lakers but then returned the favor a year later with Bowen leading the Spurs' charge to the NBA title. He ended up leading the league in 3-point field goal percentage while usually guarding the opponent's top perimeter threat -- the Kobe Bryants of the world. In 2005 he earned another championship ring and in 2006 his sixth berth on the NBA All-Defensive team. In 2007 he got another ring and more All-Defensive team recognition. He didn't miss a game between February of 2002 and March of 2008, an NBA best streak of 500 consecutive games, which ended with a one-game suspension by the league for kicking an opponent. He retired after he was traded to Milwaukee after the 2008-09 season and is now an ESPN commentator.

Prior to Bowen's emergence, the most recognizable former Titan was Cedric Ceballos, who became one of the league's top scorers for the Los Angeles Lakers and made the NBA All-Star team in 1994-95, where he was unable to play due to an injury. He began his career in Phoenix, returned to the Suns and then also played for the Mavericks, the Pistons and the Heat before getting cut by Denver and retiring. Since then he has coached in the WNBA, played in the ABA and done broadcasting work in Phoenix.

During his first four years with the Suns, he was known primarily for two things: winning the NBA slam-dunk contest in 1992 with his blind-folded "hocus pocus" act and scoring a phenomenal number of points when Charles Barkley was injured. Ceballos' absence due to another injury may have swung the tide toward Chicago in the 1994 playoffs.

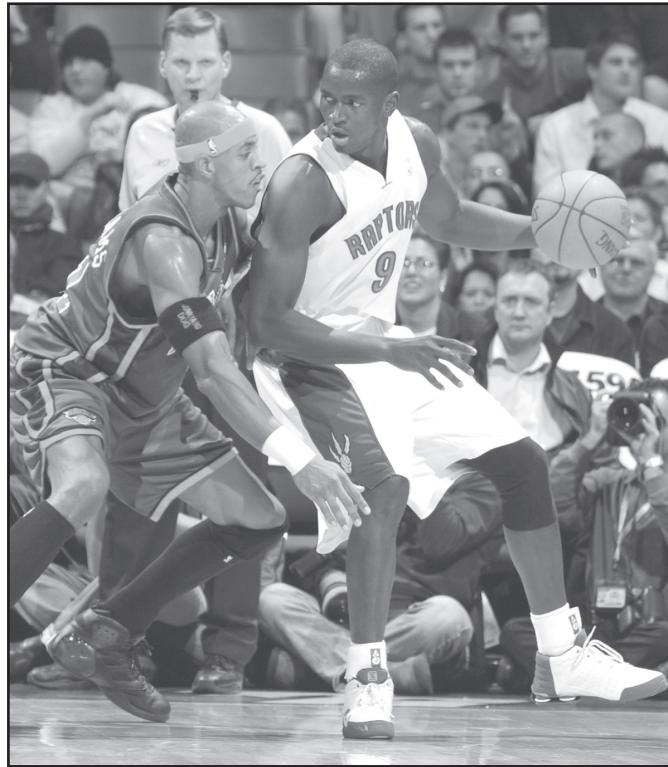

Bowen and Ceballos played together as Titans during the 1989-90 season, when Cedric was a senior and Bruce was a freshman.

Success has seemed to come in pairs for Fullerton players in the pros. The Titans hit it big in 1984 when two players made NBA rosters -- guard Leon Wood with Philadelphia and center Ozell Jones with San Antonio. Wood completed a 6-year NBA career with Sacramento on Christmas Eve, 1990. He played last in the CBA and in France and toured with Magic Johnson's All-Stars.

Pape Sow made his professional debut on Nov. 14, 2004, becoming the tenth former Titan to play in the National Basketball Association.

He has spent the last 12 seasons as an NBA referee, only the second former NBA player to make that transition. Wood began his post-Titan career as the point guard on the United States' gold-medal 1984 Olympic team under Coach Bob Knight.

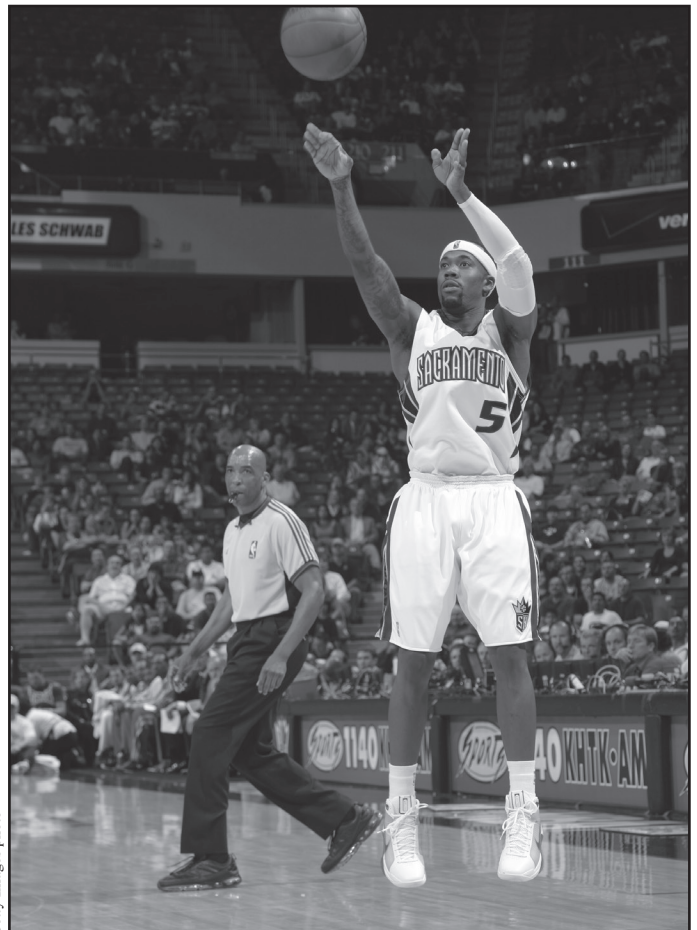

Other former Titans in and out of the NBA and CBA during recent years were 1988 graduates Richard Morton and Henry Turner. Morton started the 1988-89 season with Indiana. Turner, who was a teammate of Morton's in the CBA, spent much of the 1989-90 season with Sacramento. Morton was one of the top scorers in the CBA in recent seasons and has made the loop's all-star team.

Other Titans to play in the NBA were guard Kevin Henderson, who played with Golden State and Cleveland; forward Mike Niles with Phoenix; and forward Greg Bunch with the New York Knicks.

Foreign leagues have featured numerous former CSF players. Recent Titans earning a living at their sport are Ralph Holmes and Scott Cutley in Argentina, Frank Robinson in Israel, Babacar Camara in Japan, Marcus Crenshaw in Poland, Jamaal Brown in Germany and Josh Akognon in Estonia and China. Former center Herman (Demone) Webster, forward Kerry Boagni, forward J. D. Green, guard Aaron Sunderland, center Winston Peterson, forward David Frigout and sharpshooter Kevin Heenan are among many older ex-Titans who also played overseas.

Holmes turned down an earlier offer in Germany to help lead the Yakama Sun Kings to the 2007 CBA championship. He also was the 2007 All-Star game MVP.

Sean Williams gained fame first as an actor ("Blue Chips") and later as a member of the Harlem Globetrotters, for whom he entered the Guinness Book of World Records by dunking on a basket 11 feet, 8 inches tall.
