

Fordham University Student Host Recruiting Regulations

The role of the student host is very important in the recruiting process. The student host will help to create an environment which will leave a positive impression on the prospective student-athlete and his/her decision on whether to attend Fordham University. The following regulations were developed by our varsity coaches and administrators to assist you with providing a safe and positive environment.

- Remember that the prospect that you are hosting is someone's child. They are entrusting you and the university with the responsibility for the proper care and safety of their child while you both experience the social environment in and around Fordham and New York City.
- Get to know the prospect's interests and make every attempt to make them feel comfortable. Introduce the prospect to students, student-athletes, professors and administrators. Show the prospect a typical day at Fordham.
- Secure a copy of the prospect's itinerary for the entire visit, as well as the arrival and departure time and place, and any appointments which may be scheduled.
- Always accompany the prospect on- or off-campus while he/she is on the official visit.
- A prospect should never feel that he/she must do something which they are not comfortable doing or be somewhere they would rather not be. This includes encouraging them to consume alcohol, drugs, or engage in any illicit activities that would compromise their safety or well-being. Therefore be sensitive to the prospect's needs and interests. During an official or unofficial visit, Fordham University does not permit the following:
 - Consumption of alcohol or drugs,
 - Engaging in any illicit activities that would compromise the safety or well-being of the student host or prospect,
 - Gambling in any form,
 - Excessive meals and special transportation,
 - Male or female escort services, exotic dancers, adult entertainment facilities or videos on- or off-campus,
 - Entering bars
- Remember the reason for the prospect's visit to Fordham University, which is to learn more about the university, both academically and athletically.
- Any prospect who violates the recruiting policy may jeopardize admission to the University. Violations by current student-athletes will result in disciplinary action appropriate to the level of severity of the violation, with possible termination of athletic aid as a result. Any violation of the Student Code of Conduct by current student-athletes will be referred immediately to the Dean of Student Life for prompt investigation and adjudication.
- Always keep in mind that you are an ambassador for Fordham and its athletic program. Have fun and represent the university with appropriate behavior.
- If any problem should arise while a prospect is on an official visit, contact your coach immediately.
