

To: Georgia Tech students, alumni and everyone who loves the Yellow Jackets
From: Roddy Jones - #20 - Georgia Tech Yellow Jacket

As you know, on Saturday (Nov. 28) we will be playing the University of Georgia here on campus at Bobby Dodd Stadium. This game means a great deal, not only to both football teams, but to thousands of very passionate fans on both sides.

I can promise you that my teammates and I will play as hard as we can possibly play. Not only is our goal to win the game, but to make each of you proud to be associated with this football team and this great Institution.

We – Paul Johnson, his staff, all the players, etc. – are also counting on you on Saturday. Not only do we fully expect you to cheer your absolute loudest, drowning out the 7-8,000 who will be dressed in red and black, but we also expect and hope that you will demonstrate good sportsmanship in the process.

Let's show the world that we can enjoy success on the football field and that we can do it with class. Just as we have respect for the talent in that other locker room, we ask that you respect our visitors. Refrain from using foul language and please do not throw items on the field.

One of our team goals is that when the game is over, we want the team in the opposing locker room to know that Georgia Tech's football team played hard every snap of the game. We also want fans of our opponent to feel like Yellow Jacket fans are not only loud and supportive, but classy.

Coach Johnson often speaks to us about being one team – one family. You are a part of that family. Represent us well.

Go Jackets!
