Over the course of 104 seasons, the University of Illinois has enjoyed the creation of a stellar basketball tradition that includes Final Four appearances, All-Americans, Academic All-Americans, NBA first-round draft selections, and a place among the nation's elite basketball programs year-in and year-out. The University of Illinois basketball tradition got its start when the Big Ten Conference officially began playing basketball in 1906. At the time the member schools of the Intercollegiate Conference of Faculty Representatives or "Western Conference," or as it was originally known were University of Chicago, University of Illinois, University of Michigan, University of Minnesota, Northwestern University, Purdue University, and the University of Wisconsin.

The first official game in Illinois history was a 71-4 romp over Champaign High School in Urbana on Jan. 12, 1906. The first four years of Illinois hoops saw four different coaches who combined for a 34-30 record. In the first season of Illinois basketball the Illini went 6-8, 3-6 in the Big Ten under head coach Elwood Brown. The following season the Illini's record dropped to 1-10, 0-8 under F.L. Pinckney. A new coach, Fletcher Lane, and a new season arrived in 1907-08 and the Illini posted a 20-8 record and went 6-5 in the conference. Despite a successful season, the Illini underwent its fourth coaching change in as many years and new mentor Herb V. Juul stayed two seasons (1909 and 1910) and was 7-6 his inaugural year and 5-4 the next season.

- Big Ten grows to eight teams with the addition of Iowa in the 1907 season.

The new decade brought the program an extended taste of success. In the 1910s Illinois won two Big Ten titles, in 1915 and 1917, and compiled a 95-48 record including a perfect 16-0 record in 1915. That 1915 season was the third in the eight-year tenure of head coach Ralph Jones and it produced the only unbeaten season in Illini history and the first Big Ten title for the Illinois basketball program. Following the perfect season the Illinois team was named national champions by the Helms Foundation. Jones' 1915 team scored twice as many points as its opponents and won the conference title by three games over Chicago.

The arrival of the Woods brothers in 1915 had a lot to do with the success of this era. Guard Ray Woods was named first-team All-America all three years he competed (1915-17), and brother Ralf, a forward, led the team in scoring in both 1916 and 1917. His consistency at the free throw line led to the establishment of the Ralf Woods Award, which is still given annually to the Fighting Illini player with the best free-throw percentage.

Illinois followed up its conference championship season with a second-place finish after posting a 13-3 record. The Illini dropped two games to Northwestern and one to eventual champion Wisconsin, but the first loss to the Wildcats was the Illini's first-ever overtime game as Northwestern scored two points in the overtime period to beat Illinois, 23-21, Feb. 12, 1916, at what is now the Kenney Gym Annex.

In 1918, Jones and the Illini picked up their second conference championship crown in three years as Illinois went 13-3 overall and 10-2 in league games. The 1917 team featured a starting guard named George Halas. The professional football pioneer and former Chicago Bear owner and head coach was known on the team for his gritty defense and he was named captain of the 1918 squad before entering the armed forces Jan. 18, 1918.

- Big Ten grows to 10 teams with addition of Michigan in the 1918 season.

1920-29 (99-68, .593)

Jones led the Illini into the decade of the 1920s and started off this period with a 9-4 record and a third-place finish in the Big Ten in 1920. The following season a new mentor, Frank Winters, was in Champaign-Urbana and his two-year stay produced an 11-7 mark in 1921 and a 14-5 record in 1922.

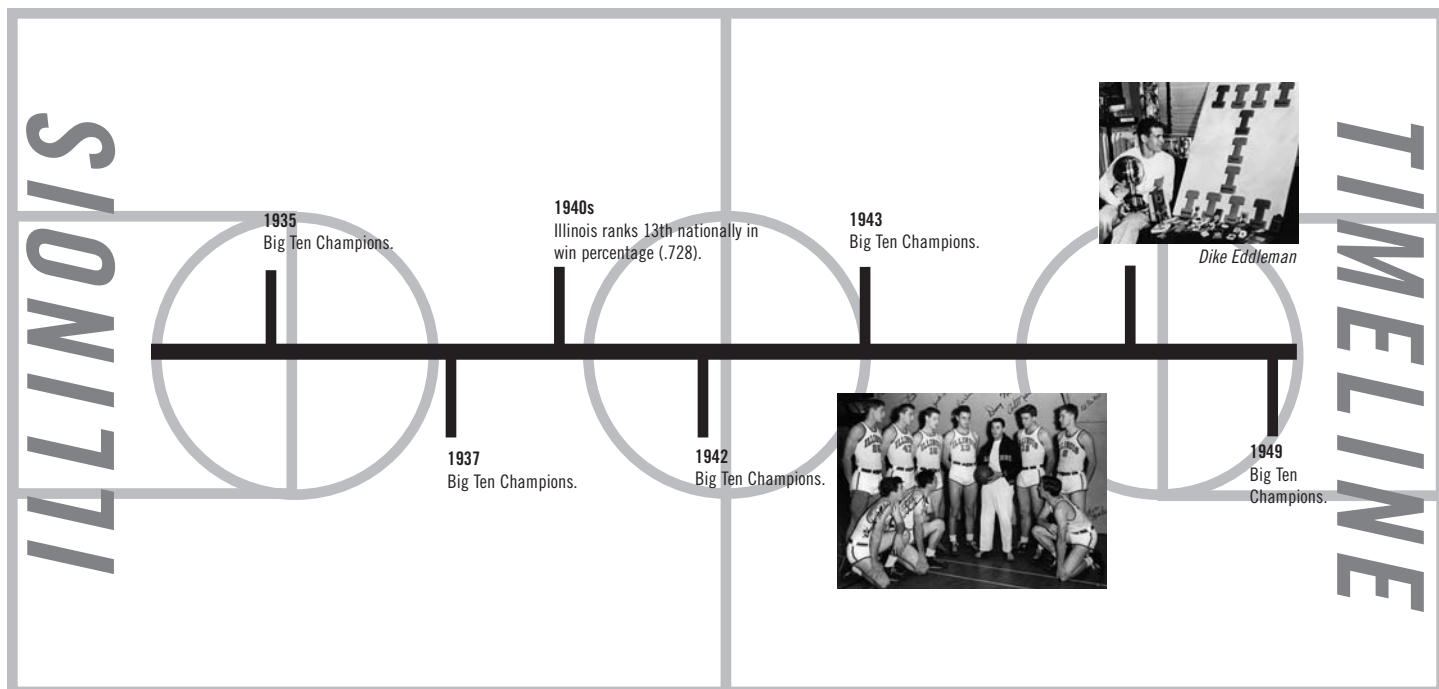

Illinois Athletic Director George Huff replaced Winters with J. Craig Ruby, whose 14-year tenure at Illinois is the third longest in program history. In his first three seasons, Ruby led the Illini to a 31-18 record and a share of the conference title with Wisconsin in 1924. In 1924, Illinois was 11-6 overall and 8-4 in the Big Ten.

After winning Illinois' third conference title in 1924, Ruby's Illini matched the win mark the following year (11-6, 8-4) but dropped to third place in the standings. The Illini opened the 1926 season on Dec. 12, 1925, against Butler in the newly built Men's Gymnasium, which would later be renamed George Huff Gymnasium after Illinois Athletic Director George Huff. Illinois won its first game at the new gym, 23-22. The remainder of the decade saw Illinois go 10-7 in both 1927 and 1929 taking fourth and fifth in the league standings, and 9-8 in 1926. The only losing season in Ruby's Illinois career came with a 5-12 mark in 1928 and it is one of only 12 losing seasons in the University's 100-year history.

In the decade of the 1930s Illinois picked up Big Ten championships number four and five in 1935 and 1937. In 1935 the Illini squad was 5-3 after its first eight games, but rallied in the closing stretch of the season and won its last four contests to grab a share of the conference title.

A new star on the playing floor emerged in the 1935 season with the addition of Harry Combes to the roster. Combes, a three-year letterwinner, starred for the Illini from 1935-37 and later returned to his alma mater as head coach of the Illini in 1948. Combes helped lead Illinois to both its Big Ten titles in the 1930s.

Ruby closed out his coaching tenure in 1935-36 leading Illinois to a 13-6 record, 7-5 in the Big Ten, and third place in the league standings.

The man chosen to replace Ruby was Douglas Mills. In his 11-year tenure as head coach, Mills established himself as the first coach in Illinois history to win or share three Big Ten championships.

In his first season, 1936-37, Mills' Illini squad captured a share of the Big Ten championship with a 10-2 league record. The Illini were 14-4 overall. Following that season, the men's gymnasium got a new name, George Huff Gymnasium, after former Illinois athletic director George Huff, who passed away on Oct. 1, 1936. During the championship season, future major league baseball Hall of Famer Lou Boudreau led the team in scoring with 8.7 points per game.

The decade of the 1940s brought much success to Illinois basketball. Head Coach Doug Mills led the Illini to consecutive Big Ten titles in 1942 and 1943. The Illini would add another league championship under Harry Combes in 1949.

The Illini were the 13th-winningest Division I team in the nation in the 1940s. Illinois' 150-57 record and .725 winning percentage was the best in the Big Ten. In 1941, Mills added to his coaching duties when he was named the school's director of athletics. That same year Art Mathisen arrived in Champaign in what would soon become the creation of the famed "Whiz Kids." In 1942, joining Mathisen were Jack Smiley, Andy Phillip, Gene Vance and Ken Menke, who captured the attention of the entire nation while winning back-to-back conference titles and combining for a 35-6 record, 25-2 in the Big Ten over those two seasons. To this day the "Whiz Kids" remain one of the most storied teams in Illinois history. They dazzled crowds everywhere averaging 58 points per game, while most teams were averaging in the low 40s.

The team was broken up March 1, 1943, when all five starters headed to active duty in the armed forces. All but Mathisen went on to play professionally, and Phillip became a member of the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame.

After the departure of the Whiz Kids, Mills faced a major rebuilding job. Mills closed out his time as head coach at Illinois in the 1947 season. That mark coincided with the return of the "Whiz Kids" from military service. A crowd of 7,785, the largest home crowd to that point in Illinois history, jammed into Huff Gym to see their return on Dec. 6, 1946, against Cornell. The Whiz Kids played only the first half of the game in building a 49-13 lead, and the Illini won 87-39. The Illini opened league play with two losses and dug their way back to a second-place finish by winning eight of their last 10 games.

After retiring from coaching, Mills retained his position as athletic director until 1966.

Former Illini Harry Combes was re-associated with the program when he was selected to replace Mills as head coach of the Fighting Illini. He had previously served as head coach at Champaign High School. In his first nine seasons at Illinois, he won three Big Ten titles and compiled an amazing record of 164-44 overall (.788) and 94-30 in the Big Ten (.758).

Combes first team at Illinois in 1947-48, led by Dike Eddleman and Jack Burmaster, set a Big Ten scoring record with 1,530 points, en route to a 15-5 overall record and 7-5 league finish. His second year as head coach, Combes collected his first of four Big Ten championships as a head coach. He finished his Illinois career with a total of six championships as a player and coach.

The four-year period between 1949-52 brought the University of Illinois three Big Ten championships, three 20-win seasons, and a 42-10 Big Ten mark. The 1949 squad, led by Eddleman, Bill Erickson, and Walter Osterkorn, was Illinois' first 20-game winner since 1908, finishing 21-4. That year, Illinois beat Yale, 71-67, to advance to a national semifinal showdown with Kentucky at Madison Square Garden in New York City. The Illini fell to the Wildcats, 76-47, forcing Illinois to defeat Oregon State, 57-53, in Seattle for third place.

- Big Ten drops from 10 to nine teams with the departure of Chicago from the league in 1947.

Two of the first three years in this decade saw Illinois bring home Big Ten championships. Illinois won the title in 1951 with a 13-1 league record and produced another 20-win season with a 22-5 record. That season featured a rematch with Kentucky, which had downed the Illini in the national semifinals in 1949. Illinois beat Columbia, 79-71, and North Carolina State, 84-70, to get to the national semifinals and a rematch with the Wildcats. In a heart-breaking loss, Kentucky nipped Illinois, 76-74, on a shot by Wildcat sub Shelby Linville with 12 seconds remaining in the game. The Illini collected third place nationally by beating Oklahoma A&M, 61-46, in Minneapolis.

The 1952 season brought Illinois another Big Ten title and introduced John Kerr, a center from Tilden Tech in Chicago. He began his three-year reign as Illinois' top scorer with a sophomore-record 357 points. The Illini recorded a 22-4 overall mark and went 12-2 in the conference. Once again, Illinois advanced to the national semifinals and ran into underdog St. John's. The Redmen fought their way to a 61-59 victory in the NCAA's first Final Four, in Seattle. Illinois took another third-place award home after beating Santa Clara, 67-64, behind 26 points by Kerr.

The 1954 season was highlighted when Kerr shattered Illinois' single-season scoring record by tallying 556 points in his senior year. Kerr's 1,299 career points in three seasons currently rank 18th on the all-time Illinois scoring list. He held first place in Illini career scoring until Dave Downey passed him in 1963. After his Illinois career came to an end, Kerr started a 12-year professional career and then became the first head coach of the Chicago Bulls in 1966.

Once again the Illini hoopsters led the Big Ten in wins for a decade with a 165-64 record in the 1950s. The Illini's winning percentage, .721, ranked 11th nationally. On Dec. 17, 1956, Illinois defeated San Francisco, 62-33, snapping the Dons' 51-game regular-season win streak. Associated Press began its basketball poll in 1949 with UPI adding its poll in 1951 and from 1951-56 the Illini finished the season ranked in the Top 20 nationally every year. Illinois' highest final ranking in the 1950s was second in both polls in 1952.

- Big Ten grows to 10 teams with addition of Michigan State in the 1951 season.

1960-69 (145-95, .604)

The 1960s produced Big Ten championship No. 11 for Illinois in 1963. That season the Illini were 20-6 overall, 11-3 in the conference. Senior Dave Downey led the team in scoring as he had the previous two seasons and he moved into first on the all-time scoring list. Downey also set the school record for points in a game, which still stands, with 53 in a road loss to Indiana on Feb. 16, 1963.

Illinois was a game back of first place in the league standings with only two games remaining when the Assembly Hall opened its doors on March 4, 1963. Illinois' first game at the Hall was an exciting 79-73 victory over Northwestern before 16,137 fans to stay within a game of first-place Ohio State. After Illinois edged Iowa, 73-69, in the last game of the season, the Fighting Illini would need an overtime loss two hours later by the Buckeyes at Indiana to share the title.

The 1965 season was highlighted by Illinois' season opening 118-83 victory over defending national-champion UCLA at the Assembly Hall. Combes called the game, "one of the best an Illinois team has ever played."

Combes closed out his Illini coaching career in 1967 with a 12-12 record and seventh-place Big Ten finish. The season was highlighted by a 98-97 victory over No. 3 Kentucky in Lexington on Dec. 8.

Another former Illini, Harv Schmidt, replaced Combes and led the team into the 1970s. Schmidt's Illini went 11-13 in 1968 and rebounded to a 19-5 record in 1969 and a second-place Big Ten finish.

The decade of the 1970s brought two coaching changes, the second one brought Lou Henson, who would become the longest-tenured coach in Illinois history. In 1970, Illinois set an NCAA attendance record, selling out all 11 home games for an average of 16,128 fans per game.

Although the Illini recorded a losing mark in 1971 (11-12), that season welcomed Nick Weatherspoon from Canton, Ohio. "Spoon" stepped right into the starting lineup and led the team in rebounds. The next two years he led the team in scoring and rebounding before becoming a first-round draft selection and spending eight seasons in the NBA.

Harv Schmidt concluded his Illinois coaching career in 1974 as the Illini's record dropped to 5-18 and last place in the Big Ten standings. The following season, Gene Bartow served as head coach, but left to take the head coaching job in replacing the legendary John Wooden at UCLA after only one season. After Bartow's departure following the 1975 campaign, the University picked New Mexico State Head Coach Lou Henson to bring success back to the Illinois program. He did just that, taking a team that won 14 games in his inaugural season to a 19-11 record within just four years. The last years of the 1970s signaled the arrival of Eddie Johnson and Mark Smith, two players who would lead the team into the 1980s and pave the way for Illinois' return to national prominence.

In 1979, Illinois finished seventh in the Big Ten, but went 19-11 overall, including ascension to No. 2 in the national polls after starting the year 15-0. That year, Illinois upset top-ranked Michigan State and Magic Johnson, 57-55, in one of the school's most memorable games. That year, Illinois also led the nation in field-goal percentage defense (.404).

Henson returned everyone for the 1980 campaign and the team gave the head coach his first of 11, 20-win seasons at Illinois. That year, Illinois made its first postseason appearance since 1963, finishing third in the NIT.

In 1981, Illinois made more strides in its return to the national spotlight with a 21-8 record, a third-place Big Ten finish and an invitation to the NCAA Tournament. The team received a first-round bye in the NCAA Tournament and beat Wyoming, 67-65, in Los Angeles to advance to the regionals in Salt Lake City, where Illinois lost to Kansas State, 57-52.

That year, the Fighting Illini led the Big Ten in scoring for the second consecutive season and were again led by Johnson and Smith. Guards Craig Tucker and Derek Harper arrived to add backcourt punch, and Harper began his Illini career being named First-Team Freshman All-America by ESPN and ABC.

The 1982 season brought Illinois another post-season appearance, in the NIT, and an 18-11 record. Harper led the Big Ten in assists and steals.

One of Illinois' best groups arrived on campus in 1983. Guards Bruce Douglas and Doug Altenberger, and forward Scott Meents and Efreem Winters joined sophomores George Montgomery and Anthony Welch to form the nucleus for a team that would win 95 games during the next four seasons.

In 1983, the Fighting Illini became the nation's 25th team to cap the 1,000-win mark with a 72-70 victory over Texas A&M in the Great Alaska Shootout. Later that year, Harper was selected First-Team All-Big Ten, falling one vote shy of being a unanimous pick, before leaving school early for the NBA draft. He was a first round selection of the Dallas Mavericks as the first pick in franchise history.

The 1984 season brought Illinois its 12th Big Ten championship in a season where Illinois had four overtime games including an epic four-overtime 75-66 victory over Michigan. The next game was a two-overtime win at Iowa, Henson's 400th victory as a college head coach. The Illini recorded a 26-5 mark and were 15-3 in Big Ten play, tying Purdue for the league title. The 1984 season also marked Illinois' first back-to-back 20 win seasons since 1951-52. The Illini would go on to record a total of nine consecutive 20-win seasons from 1983-91. Illinois advance to the NCAA Regional Finals before dropping a heart-breaking 54-51 loss to Kentucky on its home court causing the NCAA to put a rule in place not allowing a school to play in a tournament game on its home court.

The Illini started out the 1985 season ranked No. 1 nationally by Basketball Times in its preseason poll. Illinois made a return trip to the NCAA Tournament where the Illini advanced to the Sweet 16.

From 1984-87, Illinois' stingy defense ranked first in the Big Ten allowing only 54.9 points in 1984, 55.7 in 1985, 63.3 in 1986, and 70.2 in 1987. During that same 1984-87 period, Illinois also ranked first in field goal defense, and the Illini were first in three-point defense in 1987.

Junior college transfer Ken Norman highlighted the 1986 season as he set what was at the time a school record for single-season field-goal percentage (.641). The next season saw the addition of an outstanding group of young players to the roster. Guards Steve Bardo, Kendall Gill and Larry Smith joined forward

Nick Anderson in a highly touted recruiting class. This group produced another 20-win season (23-8) and a trip to the NCAA Tournament, where Illinois was beaten 68-67 by Austin Peay in arguably the school's most shocking upset.

The 1988 season brought Henson his 500th career victory and laid the foundation for what would be an incredible history making season in 1989. The 1989 team may arguably have been the most talented team ever assembled at Illinois. The players known as the "Flying Illini," included all the important pieces of 1988 (Kenny Battle, Gill, Bardo, Lowell Hamilton, Anderson and Smith) as well as junior college All-American P.J. Bowman and former high school All-American Marcus Liberty.

The Fighting Illini won their first 16 games and were ranked No. 2 in the nation going into a nationally televised game against Georgia Tech, whom Illinois had already beaten, 80-75, at the Rainbow Classic in December. The Yellow Jackets led, 47-31, but Illinois managed to surge back to force overtime, eventually needing two extra periods to win the game. Along with the No. 1 ranking the next day came some bad news. Illinois' catalyst, Gill, had broken a bone in his foot and would miss the next 12 games. Hurt by the loss of Gill, Illinois lost three of the next four games and its No. 1 ranking. The Illini rallied to finish second in the Big Ten with a 14-4 record and with Gill back in the lineup, the Illini were awarded a No. 1 seed in the Midwest Region of the NCAA Tournament. After rolling to victories over McNeese State and Ball State at the Hoosier Dome, a power-packed regional in Minneapolis with Missouri, Louisville and Syracuse, stood in the way of Illinois' trip to the Final Four.

Louisville fell victim to Illinois, losing 83-69, which set up a regional final matchup with Syracuse. The Fighting Illini held off Syracuse to advance to the Final Four in Seattle where Illinois faced Michigan, a team it had beaten twice already in 1989, in the national semifinals. Despite Battle's 29-point, 11-rebound effort, Illinois fell to eventual national-champion Michigan, 83-81.

1990-99 (187-120, .609)

Coming off the Final Four season, Illinois went 21-8 overall, 11-7 in the Big Ten in 1990. Gill, a senior, became the first player since Norman in 1987 to average 20 ppg and he was named a First-Team All-American by UPI. Gill led the Big Ten in scoring and was a finalist for the John Wooden Player of the Year Award. He was the fifth overall pick in the NBA draft that summer, going to the Charlotte Hornets.

Entering the 1991 season, Illinois, faced with the loss of Gill, Bardo and Liberty, who declared himself eligible for the NBA draft after his junior season, was picked to finish as low as ninth in the Big Ten by some publications. But, junior forward Andy Kaufmann burst onto the scene scoring 660 points, the second largest single-season total in Illinois history. He and the Illini proved the preseason expectations wrong by going 21-10 and finishing third in the Big Ten.

Illinois' consecutive 20-win season streak was snapped in 1992 when the Illini posted its first losing record in 14 years, going 13-15. After sitting out a season, Kaufmann returned for the 1992-93 campaign and helped lead Illinois to a 19-13 record and trip to the NCAA Tournament. The following season, Illinois again advanced to the NCAA Tournament and in the process, senior Deon Thomas broke a 13-year old record and became the school's all-time leading scorer. Thomas scored his record-breaking 1,693rd point in the championship game of the Illini/Pepsi Classic against American University and he went on to finish his career with 2,129 points.

In 1994 a young upstart freshman, Kiwane Garris, would begin his assault on the all-time scoring list. He notched 446 points as a freshman and would be the catalyst on the Illini team over the next few years.

Illinois finishes the season 18th in both the AP and UPI polls.

After advancing to the NCAA Tournament in 1995, Illinois extended its run on postseason play with a berth in the 1996 NIT. In 1996, the Illini started the season 11-1 before losing Garris to injury. Without its leader, the Illini dropped its first five Big Ten games. Garris returned, but was never 100 percent and junior forward Jerry Hester missed games with a severely sprained ankle. The Illini finished the 1996 season 18-13 overall, 7-11 in the Big Ten. But more importantly the 1996 season marked the end of the most successful era in Illinois basketball when Lou Henson announced his retirement before the end of the season. In his 21 years at Illinois, Henson notched 423 victories and guided the Illini to 11 NCAA Tournament appearances. The Okay, Okla. native coached Illinois to 11, 20-win seasons and finished his career as the third-winningest coach in Big Ten history with 214 league victories.

On March 21, 1996, a new era in Illinois basketball began when Director of Athletics Ron Guenther introduced Lon Kruger as the University's 14th men's basketball coach. Kruger came to Illinois from the University of Florida and carried a list of impressive credentials, including guiding Florida to the Final Four in 1994.

In his first year at Illinois, Kruger guided Illinois to a 22-10 record and the second round of the NCAA Tournament. Over the course of the season, Illinois defeated five ranked opponents, including No. 7 Minnesota, 96-90, at the Assembly Hall. Illinois also traveled to Bloomington and handed Indiana a 78-74 loss, the first win for Illinois at Assembly Hall in Bloomington since 1990.

During the course of the year, Garris etched his name in the Illinois record book with one of the best season performances by any Illini player in history. He finished his career second on the all-time scoring list with 1,948 points and set the single-season record for free throws made and attempted. Garris averaged 19.4 points and missed being the Big Ten's leading scorer by three one-hundredths of a point.

In 1998, Kruger did the unthinkable as he took a team picked to finish seventh in the Big Ten and guided the Illini to a share of its first Big Ten title since 1984. On the way to the league crown, Illinois went 5-0 against Indiana, Iowa and Michigan, marking the first time in school history the Illini had gone undefeated against those teams during the course of a season.

Illinois advanced to the second round of the NCAA Tournament after earning a No. 5 seed in the West Regional. The Illini defense was the Big Ten's best as Illinois finished the year first in scoring defense, field-goal defense and three-point defense in league games.

In October 1998, Illinois moved into a state-of-the-art basketball practice facility, the Richard T. Ubben Basketball Complex. The facility, which houses the coaches offices and practice gym, also features a weight room, training room, video review room, players' lounge and locker rooms.

The Illini closed out the 1999 season with an amazing run at the Big Ten Tournament title. After entering the tournament as the 11th-seeded team, Illinois reeled off three straight victories over Top 25-ranked teams before losing in the championship game to second-ranked Michigan State. Illini freshman Cory Bradford was the Big Ten's Freshman of the Year and was also selected to the All-Tournament team.

- Big Ten grows to 11 teams with addition of Penn State in the 1990 season.

In 2000, for the third time in four seasons, Illinois advanced to the NCAA Tournament, this time as a #4 seed. After defeating Penn in the opening round, the Illini season ended with a defeat to eventual national runner-up Florida. The Fighting Illini spent much of the season ranked in the Top 25, climbing as high as No. 15 in late December. An early three-game losing streak in Big Ten play put the Illini in a hole to start league play at 1-3. But, Illinois went on to win 10 of the last 12 league games before finishing second in the Big Ten Tournament. Cory Bradford earned second-team All-Big Ten honors after leading Illinois in scoring and the Big Ten in three-point field goals. Forward Brian Cook was named Co-Freshman of the Year in the league and earned All-Tournament honors with strong play in the Big Ten Tournament.

In May 2000, Kruger left Illinois to become head coach of the NBA's Atlanta Hawks. Bill Self was named Illinois' 15th head men's basketball coach on June 9, 2000. Self came to Illinois from Tulsa where he had led the Golden Hurricane to consecutive NCAA Tournament appearances, including a 32-5 record and tournament run to the regional finals in 2000.

Self's first season at Illinois was memorable. The Illini were ranked in the Top 10 the entire season and tied for the Big Ten Championship with Michigan State before earning a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament. The Illini run ended in the regional final to eventual national runner-up Arizona, the third meeting between the two schools on the season.

Sophomore Frank Williams became the first Illini player to earn Big Ten Player of the Year honors since 1967 and was named to several postseason All-America squads. Junior Cory Bradford set an NCAA record by making a three-point field goal in 88 consecutive games.

In 2002, the Illini earned a four-way share of the Big Ten title before advancing to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA Tournament. Frank Williams again earned first-team All-Big Ten honors as the five seniors who finished their careers took the Illini from an 11th-place finish in the league in 1999 to consecutive Big Ten titles in 2001 and 2002.

The 2003 squad started three freshmen, a sophomore and one senior, and still finished with a 25-7 record and second-place finish in the Big Ten. Brian Cook earned Big Ten Player of the Year honors and the Illini won the Big Ten Tournament championship for the first time.

Self left in March to take over as coach at Kansas, paving the way for Bruce Weber to be named the 16th Illinois head coach on April 30, 2003. Weber arrived in Champaign after directing the Southern Illinois Salukis for five seasons.

Weber's inaugural season directing the Orange and Blue was a success, as he became just the third coach in Big Ten history to win an outright conference championship in his first season. The Illini had to win its final 10 games of the regular season to clinch sole possession of the title, with six of those wins coming away from the Assembly Hall. Weber also guided Illinois to its first NCAA Tournament victory over a higher seeded team, when the No. 5 Illini defeated No. 4 Cincinnati in the second round of the tournament. The Illini finished the year with a record of 26-7 and advanced to the NCAA Sweet 16.

Illinois celebrated its 100th season of varsity basketball in style in 2004-05. Weber's Illini made the centennial year magical, putting together the finest season in UI history. The Illini tied the NCAA record for victories in a season with 37 wins en route to its 37-2 record. Illinois made its fifth all-time NCAA Final Four appearance and first since 1989. The Illini defeated Louisville in the national semifinal to advance to the NCAA Championship game for the first time in school history. Illinois finished as the national runner-up, falling to North Carolina in the title game.

The Illini started the season by setting a school record with 29 straight wins, the third-best start in Big Ten history and tying the 12th-best start in NCAA annals. Illinois won its second-ever game over a No. 1-ranked opponent, crushing Wake Forest 91-73 at the Assembly Hall on Dec. 1. After the win, the Illini took over the top spot in the national polls and held it for the remainder of the regular season, an amazing run of 15 straight weeks. Illinois was ranked No. 1 in the final Associated Press poll of 2005, another first for the program. The Illini cruised to its second straight outright Big Ten Championship with a 15-1 record, as Weber became the first coach in 100 years of Big Ten basketball to win consecutive outright league championships in his first two seasons. The Illini also won the Big Ten Tournament, becoming just the second team to win both an outright Big Ten regular season title and the Big Ten Tournament in the same season.

Bruce Weber swept all the coaching accolades imaginable in 2005, being named National Coach of the Year by 10 organizations. Dee Brown was named The Sporting News National Player of the Year and swept the conference honors as well, being named both Big Ten Player of the Year and Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year. The Illini had three players earn consensus All-America honors in the same season for the first time ever. In addition to Brown earning consensus first-team All-America honors, Deron Williams and Luther Head were named consensus second-team All-Americans. Following the season, both Williams and Head were chosen in the first round of the NBA Draft, with Williams becoming the highest Illinois player ever drafted when he was chosen No. 3 overall by the Utah Jazz.

Illinois continued its winning ways in 2006, posting a 26-7 overall record in Bruce Weber's third season directing the Illini. It marked the program's sixth-straight 25-win season, the longest in school history and doubling the longest streak of any team in Big Ten history. Illinois went undefeated in non-conference play for the second-straight season and was in the race for a third-straight conference title before finishing second in the league standings with an 11-5 record, missing the Big Ten crown by just one game. The Illini then made their seventh-straight NCAA Tournament appearance, earning a No. 4 seed, and advanced to the second round. Seniors Dee Brown and James Augustine wrapped up their UI tenure as the winningest players in school history, recording a school-record 114 career wins.

Illinois recorded its eighth-straight 20-win season in 2006-07. Weber's fourth Illini team went 23-13 overall, finished fourth in the Big Ten with a 9-7 record and appeared in the NCAA Tournament for the program's eighth consecutive year. Illinois relied on its defense throughout the season, allowing just 57.1 points per game to lead the Big Ten and rank fourth in the nation in scoring defense.

Illinois won 16 games in 2007-08 and finished the season strong, winning four of its last five games and advancing to the championship game of the Big Ten Tournament.

Illinois returned to the NCAA Tournament during the 2008-09 season, earning a No. 5 seed. The Illini recorded the nation's third-biggest turnaround on the season, winning 24 games. Illinois also finished as the Big Ten runner-up, marking the fourth top-two league finish in six years under Bruce Weber. The Illini led the Big Ten and ranked third in the nation in scoring defense, allowing 57.2 points per game. On offense, Illinois led the nation in assist rate, recording assists on 69.3 percent of its baskets.

Dee Brown had a legendary career at the University of Illinois. As a junior in 2005, Brown was The Sporting News National Player of the Year, a consensus First-Team All-American, and both the Big Ten Player of the Year and Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year. As a senior in 2006, Brown was a consensus second-team All-American and won the Bob Cousy Award as the nation's top point guard (pictured, right) as well as the Frances Pomeroy Naismith Award as the nation's top player 6-feet tall and under.

Three recent Chicago Tribune Silver Basketball Trophies were won by Illini players Frank Williams (2001), Brian Cook (2003) and Dee Brown (2005).

BIG TEN MEDAL OF HONOR

In 1914, the Big Ten Conference endowed a Medal of Honor, to be awarded annually at each institution to the student demonstrating proficiency in scholarship and academics. Since 1982, a female athlete from each institution has also been awarded the Conference Medal of Honor. In the 95-year history of the award, 17 Fighting Illini basketball players have earned the accolade, including Edward A. Williford, the University of Illinois' first recipient of the award. There has been one father-son UI Medal of Honor duo, Lee Sentman (track) in 1931 and his son Lee Sentman III (fencing) in 1958. The following is the list of Illinois basketball players who have won the Big Ten Medal of Honor:

1915	Edward A. Williford	1949	T. Dwight Eddleman
1917	Clyde Godel Alwood	1953	Clive Follmer
1920	John B. Felmley	1963	David J. Downey

1943	Edwin S. Parker	2009	Trent Meacham
1945	Donald Delaney

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS ATHLETES OF THE YEAR

The University of Illinois Athlete of the Year was first given in 1940. The award was given annually until it was discontinued in 1973. There were no awards given until 1982, when the Big Ten began a Conference Athlete of the Year, in which each school nominated a male and female athlete. Since 1982, Illinois has recognized a male and female Athlete of the Year. In 1993, the awards were renamed the Dike Eddleman Athlete of the Year awards in honor of the 11-time UI letterman and Olympian. Over the years, 16 basketball players have earned the distinction of Illinois Athlete of the Year.
