Calling all Illini Volleyball fans! It is time again to become a member of the Illini Networkers, the fan support group for Illinois Volleyball. The Illini Networker membership year kicks off March 1 so you can support the team through the spring practice season and all of the fall events during the regular season. The Fighting Illini will follow up their historic 2011 season with more fast-paced action of women's collegiate volleyball.

The Illini Networkers were formed in 1984 to support the Illinois Women's Volleyball Team. Members enjoy the opportunity to support the team by attending matches, showing their Illini spirit, attending special Illini Networkers' events, and helping with their talents and resources.

Being a member of the Illini Networkers is a great way to follow your U of I team and get to know more about one of the Big Ten's and nation's premier women's college volleyball programs.

Head Coach Kevin Hambly says, "The Networkers are one of the components that make the Illini program very special.

The work that they do behind the scenes has added a great deal to not only the athletes' experience but also the Spike Squad (student fan group) and the community."

In recent years, Illini Networkers have supported the team in many ways. A few ways include:

- Attending home and away matches
- Supporting international competitions
- Enhancing our team locker rooms and meeting rooms
- Sponsoring the annual volleyball team awards banquet
- Honoring our seniors each year by hanging senior banners in Huff Gym
- Supporting student "Spike Squad" fan activities at home and away matches.
- Supporting the team with the purchase of an iPad for scouting and training use.

Join today and support the team!
