REDBIRD DEVELOPMENTAL CLINIC

Sunday, January 18, 2009

The Illinois State University Softball team is conducting a developmental clinic for all girls in 2nd through 8th grade. This clinic's purpose is to develop the fundamental skills necessary to be a successful softball player. Each year, thousands of young women and girls strive to improve their skills in the game of softball. The Redbird Developmental Softball Clinic at Illinois State will not only feature an excellent staff and facilities, but provide each player with a unique experience. Each participant will leave with the chance to improve her softball skills in Illinois State's fine facility.

An expert staff of qualified and professional personnel will assist Camp Director Melinda Fischer in making the Redbird Developmental Softball Clinic both valuable and worthwhile. No previous softball experience is required.

Individual attention will be emphasized in all phases of the game. Instruction on all fundamentals of softball for all levels of play, position instruction and practice, pitching instruction, hitting/bunting instruction, and a fun and challenging environment. The Redbird Developmental Softball Clinic will make every effort to attend to the player's desire to improve her individual skills.

All players will be grouped according to age. They will be under the personal supervision of professional staff who specialize in all areas essential to building a solid softball foundation.
