Prospective Student-Athletes Visit Policy

Johns Hopkins University Athletics is committed to attracting the best student-athletes to build upon the tradition of academic and athletic excellence. As part of the recruiting process we encourage our coaches to invite prospective student-athletes on campus to interact with other students and potential teammates, see our facilities, eat in the dining hall, attend class, and get a first-hand experience of the life of a Johns Hopkins varsity student-athlete. There are certain NCAA and institutional rules, regulations, procedures, and policies that must be followed by the coaches, student-athlete hosts, and visiting prospective student-athletes before and after each visit. Unless otherwise noted, the following applies to both the Division I and Division III teams when hosting prospective student-athletes.

- Prospective student-athletes (PSA) may make as many unofficial visits to campus at their own expense as they would like.
- Meals – (Division I) Prospective student-athletes may eat a meal with current student-athletes at an on-campus dining facility as long as they pay for the actual price of the meal. (Division III) One meal may be provided by Johns Hopkins University (JHU) Athletics at an on-campus dining facility.
- Entertainment – JHU Athletics may provide a maximum of three complimentary admissions to a PSA for ticketed JHU athletic events not including NCAA or Conference Championships.
