All-Time Coaching Records in National Postseason Competition

Connecticut's Jim Calhoun is the only coach in college basketball history to win at least two-thirds of his games in both the NCAA Tournament and NIT for coaches with more than 10 decisions in each event. Following is a ranking for coaches who had a minimum of 20 tournament games in national postseason competition:

*In the mid-1970s, the NCAA introduced a short-lived, eight-team tournament ostensibly to showcase league runners-up but principally to erode the NIT's influence. The tourney was called the Collegiate Commissioners Association Tournament in 1974, when Indiana won the title at St. Louis, and then changed to the National Commissioners Invitational Tournament in 1975, when Drake won the title at Louisville. Records for high-profile coaches in the event included: Fred Snowden (2-1 with Arizona), Ned Wulk (0-1 with Arizona State), Bob Knight (3-0 with Indiana), Jack Hartman (0-1 with Kansas State), Norm Stewart (0-1 with Missouri), Fred Schaus (1-1 with Purdue), Bob Boyd (2-2 with Southern California) and Ray Mears (0-2 with Tennessee).
