2007-08 Season Preview

2007-08 Outlook

Overall Outlook

One of the youngest squads in recent years will take to the court for the Navy women's basketball team during the upcoming 2007-08 season. The 14-player roster consists of one senior, four juniors, six sophomores and three freshmen. The last time a Navy roster consisted of as few as five upperclassmen and as many as nine underclassmen was during the 2001-02 season (five juniors and seniors, 11 freshmen and sophomores).

After a four-member senior class led the Mids in nearly every statistical category last year, how the players respond to the need for them to step into prominent roles on the squad this season is one of the big question marks entering the fall.

"There really are so many unknowns as we head into the season," said Navy head coach Tom Marryott. "A quick look at our roster reveals we have lost a huge amount of experience and offensive production through graduation. The loss of four outstanding seniors is always difficult for a team to overcome, however, as I look at what we have returning, I am confident the returning players are ready to fill the shoes of last year's senior class.

"We have more depth in all positions this season than we did last year. I believe this depth will really benefit us on the defensive side of the ball. Additionally, I see this team scoring in a lot of different ways. We should be able to extend our defense a little more than we have in the past, which should create more open court situations for us and a slightly higher tempo in our games."

Returning Athletes

Navy returns from its 2006-07 roster ...

- ◆ 1 of 5 starters
- ◆ 4 of 9 letterwinners
- ◆ 10 of 17 players

Navy returns over half of its 2006-07 roster, but of those 10 players only four earned letters and just one was a regular starter on last year's squad.

Not only is this year's team young in terms of age, it also is youthful in its amount of game experience. Whereas that 2001-02 team entered the year with its players having totaled over 400 career games played, 100 starts and nearly 2,000 points, the career tally for this year's squad is only 243 games played, 41 starts and 424 points.

"Obviously, the one thing we are short of is game experience," said Marryott. "About the only place where we do have a lot of experience is at the point with Kalen Kropa. She is coming off a very strong sophomore year and her continual improvement throughout the spring and summer has been very good.

"We have had flashes of potential from really everyone else on the squad, but now is their time to step up and lead this team."

Newcomers

Navy welcomes three freshmen and one sophomore to this year's team

Although the four newcomers will be entering their first season on the collegiate level, the opportunity for them to make an impact on this year's team is available to them.

"We are excited about our new players," said Marryott. "Off the court, the plebes have made the adjustment to life at the Academy smoothly, while they have already shown great promise on the court in early season workouts.

"Angela Myers and Ali Tartacoff will push some of the upperclass for minutes. Cassie Consedine has really impressed us with her poise in the low post and her ability to score. K.C. Gordon brings with her the knowledge and experience of competing on a successful women's team at Navy (women's soccer)."

Non-Conference Schedule

Instead of having the opportunity to get their feet wet against a relatively easy non-conference schedule, the Mids will be tested by a challenging slate of foes right from the start of the season. Not only will Navy play nine of its 16 non-conference games away from Annapolis, the Mids also will have the potential to face teams from the Mountain West (Air Force, Colorado State, San Diego State), Big East (Georgetown), Missouri Valley (Creighton) and Mid-American (Kent State, Ohio) conferences, as well as Conference USA

(Marshall, Rice) along the way.

While the Mids will definitely be tested over the opening two months of the season, the challenges they will face during that time should prepare them for the rigors of the Patriot League season.

"We have put together one of our tougher non-league schedules," said Marryott. "In order for us to challenge for a Patriot League title we are going to have to continue to improve from the start of the season until we open up against Bucknell in January. Our schedule will certainly test us. By the time league play begins, we will have played against many different styles of basketball. It will be a big test for us, but also beneficial."

Patriot League Outlook

2007-08 Patriot League Pre-Season Poll

1. Bucknell (92 pts. / 10 first-place votes)
2. Army (83 / 4)
3. Holy Cross (77 / 1)
4. American (62 / 1)
5. Lehigh (46)
6. Navy (33)
Lafayette (33)
8. Colgate (22)

The parity of the Patriot League was never more evident than during the 2007 league tournament when the Nos. 1 and 2 teams lost to the Nos. 8 and 7 squads, respectively, in the quarterfinal round and the No. 3 team had to go into overtime to defeat the No. 7 squad in the semifinal round.

This year, half of the league's teams received first-place votes in the pre-season poll.

Individually, seven of the 10 players who garnered first or second-team accolades at the end of the 2006-07 season return this year. Also returning are five of the eight players who led their respective teams in either points scored or scoring average a year ago.

"As strong as the league was last season, I believe the level of play this year will be even higher," said Marryott. "Any number of teams have the ability to win the regular season. As I look at what each team in the league has returning, I envision this year's regular season to be a very competitive one and full of close games. I truly believe the race for the league title will come down to the last week of the season. It should make for very exciting basketball throughout January and February."

Ali Currier

2007-08 Season Preview

Offense

Navy's 2006-07 overall offensive statistics ...

54.8 ppg, 37.9% FG, 30.4% 3-FG, 72.8% FT, 11.6 off. reb., 13.7 ast., 18.7 turn.

There were games last year in which the Mids shot well from the perimeter but struggled to score inside, while other games saw the Navy post players have success in the paint without receiving an equal contribution from the outside. Having a consistent inside and outside game to force opponents to pick and choose which areas they need to focus on is one of the goals for the Mids this season.

"We should be fairly balanced on the offensive end this year," said Marryott. "We have a good mix of perimeter shooters as well as a strong post presence. We will need to establish our inside game in order for us to maintain some consistency offensively. Over the years we have shot the ball well from the perimeter when we did have that scoring ability in the post. I think this year will be no different in that regard. We have very good shooters on the perimeter and I expect them to be able to score for us."

Defense

Navy's 2006-07 overall defensive statistics ...

58.6 ppg, 37.2% FG, 30.7% 3-FG, 25.8 def. reb., 14.3 turn., 3.4 blocks, 6.3 steals

One of Navy's strengths last year was its defense. The Mids were nationally ranked in both defensive field goal percentage (38th) and scoring defense (44th), while allowing foes to post the second and fourth-lowest points per game averages for league (57.6 ppg) and non-league (58.6) games in Navy history.

"I expect us to be a strong defensive team this season," said Marryott. "Our players have a very good understanding of how to play defense and how hard they need to play. In the past we have not been able to extend the floor as much as we would like to on the defense end. However, I believe this year we have the personnel to do that. I am a firm believer that in order to win consistently, you need to be a good defensive team so our priority this year, as is every other year, will be to improve our defense."

Backcourt

Players Lost (2006-07 Averages)

Newcomers

- ◆ K.C. Gordon
- ◆ Angela Myers
- ◆ Ali Tartacoff

Kalen Kropa is the lone returning regular starter from last year's backcourt, but Ali Currier and Whitney Davidson combined to start nearly half of the games a year ago.

Kropa not only led the Patriot League in assists last season with an average of 4.79 assists per game, she also tallied an assist on one out of every four field goals made by the Mids last season.

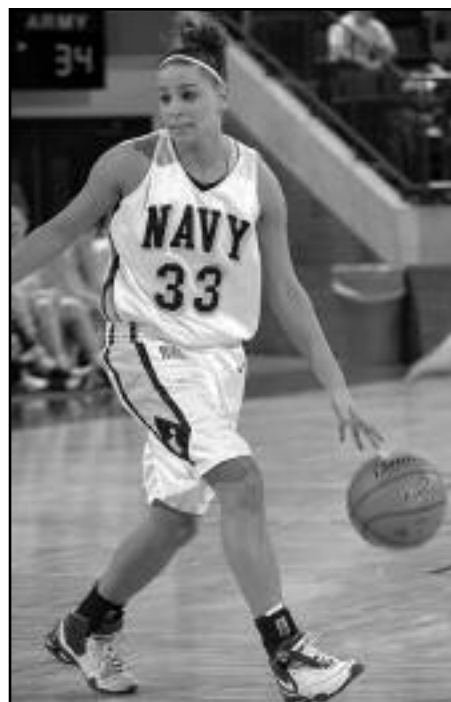

Currier will serve as Navy's team captain this season and personifies the defensive toughness Marryott is looking for in his team. Meanwhile, after seeing flashes of her abilities last season, Davidson is poised to have a breakout year in 2007-08.

"Every team takes on the personality and attributes of its team captain," said Marryott. "In that regard we are in great shape with Ali as our leader. Her commitment to this team and her work ethic are going to carry over in everything that we do. We are going to count on Ali to not only lead this team but to also raise her level of play.

"We are in good hands with Kalen running the offense at the point. Her experience in this league over the past two years has made her ready to accept an even bigger role in our offense this year."

Also back for the Mids on the perimeter are Emily Cordle, Emily Lyren and Kristin Bowen.

Cordle set a Navy freshman class record for three-point field goal percentage two years ago, Lyren both replaced and was on the court at the same time as Kropa last year, and Bowen spent last year as an understudy at the shooting guard position.

"We lost a lot of scoring from our perimeter due to graduation," said Marryott. "To replace that we need our juniors to raise their production and I am confident that Whitney, Emily Cordle and Emily Lyren are ready to accept that responsibility and excel at it. Each one of them have shown the ability to take on more of a scoring role in the past, but now they are going to have to be more consistent in that effort, both collectively and individually.

"Kristin Bowen and K.C. Gordon have both shown us some good things in the preseason, as have Angela and Ali."

Newcomers

- ◆ Cassie Consedine

With the top-four scorers from last year's frontcourt gone, Marryott will be looking to see which players are prepared to fill the void.

As freshmen last year, Kelly Altschul and Morgan Hill earned more playing time as the 2006-07 season went on. Whereas last year their roles were limited, this year they will be expected to lead.

"Our frontcourt will be young, but I think our post players are going to have a major impact on our success this season," said Marryott. "Kelly and Morgan both played very well in limited roles last season. They have learned the college game and are skilled and physical enough that we can count on them."

Marryott also has two additional returning players from last season's frontcourt in Sarah Simmler and Amanda Taylor. Their experience, athletic ability and consistent improvement from the start of practice last fall gives them the potential to earn valuable minutes this season.

"Sarah has really impressed the entire coaching staff this fall and she has all the tools to make an impact for us," said Marryott. "Amanda also has had a strong preseason and continues to improve for us."

Navy only has one newcomer to the frontcourt, but at 6-3 Cassie Consedine will contest for playing time right away.

"Cassie is right in the mix for us," said Marryott.
