^ — Maryland State Women's Division B Tournament, St. Mary's, Md.

In addition to fielding the program's 30th varsity team, this season also marks the 30th anniversary of the first Navy women's basketball team, a squad which competed on the junior varsity level during the 1976-77 season, the first academic year in which women were admitted to the Naval Academy.

Basketball was one of the first sports offered to the initial class of women who arrived in Annapolis during our nation's Bicentennial summer, and picked to lead the program during its infant years was Dave Smalley.

Smalley was one of the great athletes to attend the Academy, winning the NAAA Sword in 1957 as the midshipman of the graduating class "to have personally excelled in athletics during his years of varsity competition" after excelling in both basketball and baseball. After serving in the Marine Corps, he returned to the Academy as a member of the physical education department and an assistant coach with the men's basketball team. He later served as the head coach of the program for a decade, a post he retired from during the spring of 1976.

"Bo Coppedge, who was the athletic director at the time, asked me in early September if I wanted to coach the women's team," recalled Smalley. "I told him I wasn't too sure about this idea, so I said I would think about it. I had two daughters and they helped convince me to take the job."

Now that a coach was in place, there were a few other matters to take care of, namely making a schedule, getting uniforms and eventually picking a team.

A total of 81 women were admitted to the Naval Academy that year, with 20 of them trying out for the team in October. Smalley kept 13 on the squad, with more than half of them never having played on any kind of competitive basketball team before.

"I looked at the players on the first day and thought, 'oh my God, what have I gotten myself into,'" said Smalley with a chuckle.

Smalley could see a few players who stood out due to their abilities, namely Cathy Rayhill, Kathy Walsh, Sue Keller and Susan Stapler.

"Cathy Rayhill had played before and she was a post player, so she knew about rebounding," said Smalley. "Kathy Walsh was lefthanded and could shoot and Sue Keller was a guard who could bring the ball up the floor. Susan Stapler was a forward who was pretty athletic and could run the floor, but she was a volleyball player who didn't know too much about basketball."

Without an experienced squad, practices throughout the season were spent on teaching basic fundamentals such as pivoting, passing, shooting and footwork. Scrimmages were kept to a minimum.

"I was scared one of our primary players would get hurt," said Smalley. "Even when we did some of the more physical drills, I did things like pull one of the starters aside and talk to them while the drill was going on. I knew what we had and they had to last through the season."

Finally, January 7, 1977, arrived and so did the first game in the program's history. Mount St. Mary's was the opponent in the initial contest played in Halsey Fieldhouse. Despite their lack of experience, the Mids suffered only a 51-50 loss to the Mountaineers.

"I thought it was pretty good to lose by only one point to a program which had a team the year before," said Smalley. "Most of the teams we played were in similar situations as we were in as the sport of women's basketball was very young. However, we were the only team we played which had a roster of all freshmen."

After its initial one-point loss, Navy would pick up its first victory the very next time the Mids took to the floor, a 65-48 win over Gallaudet on Jan. 22. The winning streak continued over the remainder of the regular season as the Mids entered the MAIAW (Maryland Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) State Tournament with an 8-1 record.

The Mids posted a 65-35 victory over Johns Hopkins in the semifinal game, then found themselves facing St. Mary's in the title game. Navy had recorded a 54-50 win over the Seahawks in Annapolis during the regular season, but this game would be played at St. Mary's. The result turned out to be the same, however, as Navy, the team with just one offense and one defense in its playbook, won the championship with a 61-55 triumph.

"If anyone saw our celebration after the game, they would have thought we had just won the NCAA title," said Smalley. "They were proud of what they had accomplished back then and I hope they still are today. This was a group of pioneers. They set the tone for the program and we are still grateful they came out for the team."

"It was a fun group to start the program from scratch with."

Season Recap

- Overall Record — 18-9
- Head Coach — Dave Smalley
- Team Captain — Jean Eberhardt

Navy goes on an eight-game winning streak, which will be the longest for the program for eight more years.

Nancy Schiavetta plays in her 100th career game, becoming the first Mid to reach the century mark in career games played.

Angela Smith records six blocked shots in Navy's gamer F19 against American. It would take 11 years for the record to be tied (Yolanda Ray), but it has never been broken.
