The Notre Dame-Ohio State game at Moose Krause Stadium, a thrilling 9-8 contest that determined the Great Western Lacrosse League champion, was shown by College Sports Television. In 2005, the Irish contest against North Carolina on March 12 at The First 4 in Carson, Calif., will be televised by CSTV.

Dave Cashen '97

Academic All-America defenseman
Columbia University Medical School

"Nowhere in the country could I have found such a good education and a school surrounded by students who love their school, what it stands for and most of all their classmates. I was able to combine this with four years of competitive lacrosse on a team nationally-ranked, well-coached and most of all, created by 35 teammates devoted to each other on and off the field. It is a great feeling to have 35 friends always to support, encourage and entertain you, especially two years later."

Kevin O'Connor '89

Captain of the 1989 team
U.S. Attorney for the state of Connecticut

"As a candidate for United State Congress, I was amazed at the amount of attention given by the media and voters to my having served as captain of the lacrosse team at the University of Notre Dame. Indeed, of all the activities in which I have been involved, my experience as a lacrosse player at Notre Dame was the most valuable in the campaign. The traits that make Notre Dame athletics special in the eyes of the public – sportsmanship, integrity and success – are of equal value in the political arena."

Irish Reflections...

Mike Iorio '95

Three-time All-America defenseman Employed at American National Bank in Chicago, Ill.

"Notre Dame lacrosse provided me with four years of fun and excitement, and it continues to be a part of my life. As a freshman in 1992, I was a part of the team that had the program's first top-10 win. By my senior year, we had accomplished what no other NCAA Division I men's lacrosse team had ever done - the No. 12 seed knocked off the No. 5 seed in the first round of the NCAA Tournament. In the four years that came between these two historic Notre Dame lacrosse events, I received a great education, developed the teamwork and time management skills that I utilize every day in the banking world and built friendships that will last me a lifetime."

Jimmy Keenan '98

Three-time honorable mention
All-America midfielder Employed as an accountant at UBS in New York City and was a member of the
New York Saints of the National Lacrosse League

"The decision to attend Notre Dame and play lacrosse there has turned out to be the most gratifying decision of my life thus far. This unique University fulfilled all I could have wished for as a high school senior. As a school, it offers everything from academics to athletics to nightlife and a campus atmosphere that can only be summed up with the cliché 'Notre Dame Family.' The experience, memories and friends that I have accumulated over my four years there have really defined who I am today. Playing lacrosse at Notre Dame, with its tradition and history, was certainly the proudest and most memorable experience for me. The team and the University will always remain a part of my life for it is truly a family."

Moose Krause Stadium has been the home of Notre Dame lacrosse since its construction in 1988. The venue has seen a multitude of big games and top players.

The facility, named after former director of athletics Edward W. "Moose" Krause, is located just east of the Joyce Center on the Cartier Field complex and has a seating capacity of 5,000 and also is used by the Irish track and field squads.

Krause Stadium features 2,500 permanent bleachers on both sides of the 70 x 120-yard grass field. The stands are raised so that the first row of seats measures six feet above field level for better viewing, and there is ample room for wheelchair seating. The field itself is surrounded by a nine-lane Mondo track, the fastest surface of its kind in the world.

The Irish have had considerable success at home, posting a 75-25 (.750) record since Krause Stadium was built. That includes four undefeated campaigns and 18 victories over ranked opponents. Each of the first six ranked opponents to travel to Krause Stadium were defeated by the Irish. The biggest win at Krause Stadium was a 10-9 victory over #4 Hofstra on April 4, 1997.

Krause Stadium saw its first intercollegiate lacrosse action on March 26, 1988, when Notre Dame posted a 14-4 victory over Wooster.

Krause Stadium/Loftus Center Notes

- When Krause Stadium and the Loftus Sports Center were completed in 1988, it improved the University of Notre Dame's lacrosse facilities from average to among the best in the nation.

- The Loftus Sports Center is one of just six indoor facilities in the country that plays host to Division I men's lacrosse games.

- On March 26, 1988, Notre Dame opened play in Krause Stadium, posting a 14-4 victory over Wooster.

- On April 27, 1988, the Loftus Sports Center saw lacrosse game action for the first time as Notre Dame beat regional rival Michigan State 10-7.

- In the 16 seasons of Irish men's lacrosse in Krause Stadium and the Loftus Sports Center, Notre Dame has compiled a 75-25 (.750) record in home games.

- The Irish have posted four undefeated home campaigns in the current facilities (1994, '95, '97, and 2001) and have lost just once at home in six other seasons.

- Notre Dame is 18-14 against ranked opponents in Krause Stadium and the Loftus Sports Center.

- Each of the first six ranked opponents to play the Irish in Krause Stadium or the Loftus Sports Center went home with losses. It was not until 1996, the ninth year of play in the facilities that a ranked team beat Notre Dame on its home field.

- On April 4, 1997, Notre Dame edged #4 Hofstra 10-9 as part of a streak of three consecutive wins over ranked foes.

- Among the top programs to have played in Krause Stadium or the Loftus Sports Center are North Carolina, Cornell, Maryland, Loyola, Georgetown, Pennsylvania, Army, Hofstra, Harvard, Massachusetts, Rutgers, Hobart, UMBC, and Penn State.

- Krause Stadium and the Loftus Sports Center have played host to 28 games in which both teams were nationally ranked. The Irish are 15-13 in those contests.

- Notre Dame is one of just six Division I schools that plays host to games in an indoor facility, joining Dartmouth, Hobart, Penn State, Syracuse, and Towson.

The Loftus Sports Center combines with Krause Stadium to give the University of Notre Dame some of the top lacrosse facilities in the country. Constructed in 1988, it is one of just six indoor facilities in the country that plays host to Division I men's lacrosse games.

The Loftus Center provides Notre Dame with one of the top multi-purpose indoor facilities in the nation. Complete with the 120-yard synthetic turf Meyo Field, six-lane 352-yard Mondo indoor track and a 9,000-square-foot weight room, it is used by several Irish athletic programs.

The building is named after John R. Loftus of St. Charles, Ill., a 1949 graduate of the University. Loftus is chief executive of JRL, a real estate, investment and construction firm. Loftus is also a member of the Notre Dame Monogram Club, having played on the varsity basketball team in 1944, 1948 and 1949.

The Meyo Field in the Loftus Center offers Irish lacrosse a 55-by-110 yard synthetic turf playing surface. It was revamped in the summer of 2003 with the addition of Prestige field turf. The field and surrounding track are named for Ray and Marie Meyo of Brecksville, Ohio. Meyo, who graduated from Notre Dame in 1964, is president and chief executive officer of Telxon Corp. in Akron, Ohio, the world's largest manufacturer of portable tele-transaction computers.

The Meyo Field is permanently marked for lacrosse competition and is used as a backup site for games in the event of inclement weather. The Irish have played several contests in the Loftus Center.

In addition to the Meyo Track and Field in the Loftus Center, the Irish lacrosse squad also benefits from the Haggart Fitness Center located in the facility. Equipped with more than 40,000 pounds of free weights, it is four times the size of the weight room in the Joyce Center. It is considered by national strength coaches to be one of the largest, and finest, college training facilities in the nation.

The Irish have had considerable success at home, posting a 75-25 (.750) record since the Loftus Sports Center was built. That includes four undefeated campaigns and 18 victories over ranked opponents.

A Championship with Meaning

By Todd Rassas

I had a tough start to my experience with the World Team. My office was in 7 World Trade Center and was destroyed due to the attack on Sept. 11. I was sitting at my desk at the time the first plane impacted the World Trade Center. After hearing the explosion we evacuated the building.

At this time a few agents and I ran towards the bottom of the World Trade Center to set up a triage center. While waiting for the injured to come out, we had to move under a walkway to avoid being hit by people and debris falling from the top floors. I remember bandaging a lady's hand, then hearing the second plane accelerate right before it exploded above us. I just hugged the pylon that held up the walkway in hope that the plane wouldn't crash down on us.

At this point I ran a block north to help with all of the emergency personnel trying to get closer. About 15 minutes later I ran from the first tower that fell.

A number of agents regrouped and returned to look for survivors. We got about a block and a half away from the remaining tower when I saw the top floor drop. I turned and started running for my life. All I could think of was my dad saying "when you have the ball, never look back because it makes you run slower." I thought I was going to get crushed. If the tower would have fallen a little more towards the Hudson River I would not be here today. I feel very fortunate to have survived this attack. The victims of Sept. 11 are in my thoughts and prayers every day.

I spent the next four weeks at Ground Zero while almost everyone else on my U.S. team was taking part in fall practice. The fall tournament was probably the worst time for me to be playing lacrosse. I don't even recall all of the teams that we played.

Though I was not ready to play then, I knew there would be no better time to wear red, white, and blue. I think every athlete has a dream at one time or another to wear his or her country's jersey. I remember when all this started Darren Lowe said, "Don't ever underestimate someone playing for his or her country." Every time I put my jersey on, I thought of someone from Sept. 11, or someone who told me, "You can't," or my family who traveled around the world to watch me play a game that I love.

This team was motivated by the so-called lacrosse scholars that predicted us to lose. I took criticism more personally than most of the others on the team. Growing up in Illinois, I have always had to battle the critics. I have six motivational letters at my house. The first is a rejection letter from the University of Notre Dame. After giving up a year of competitive lacrosse and spending a year at Holy Cross College in Indiana, I now have an acceptance letter from Notre Dame. The third letter is a rejection letter from the United States Secret Service based on lack of experience. Two years later I was employed by the USSS. Finally I have a letter from U.S. Lacrosse explaining how I didn't make the cut for a tryout for the 1998 U.S. Team. Now there is a letter saying I made the team and a gold medal that sits with that rejection letter.

This experience was so enjoyable because the team was told that we were the underdogs from the start. Someone e-mailed me and said that we were being displayed as the "Bad News Bears." We had to bond together.

There was not one guy on our team trying to be a superstar, well at least on the field - some could argue Ryan Mollett and Ryan Boyle were superstars in the social arena.

At times on defense, Mollett, John Glatzel, and I were begging someone to shoot the ball. The offense was so unselfish in its play, its motto seemed to be, "I don't want to shoot. You shoot."

We played our first game against the Iroquois Nationals and won 22-6. Then we read an Australian newspaper with some not-so-favorable quotes from the Australian coach, along the lines that it was the Australians' year and the U.S. team is over-rated and under-talented. In warm-ups, instead of running around their half of the field, the Australians took a lap all the way around to our bench. Putting it lightly, I don't think many of our guys, especially Nicky Polanco, appreciated it. From then on it seemed as though the game was over before it started, and we won 22-7. Not too bad for being over-rated and under-talented.

Then we had to get geared up for Canada. This game was the worst display of lacrosse that I have ever seen. Canada had nearly 30 minutes of penalties. Canada was taking cheap shots and late hits to take some of our players out of the game. At one point we had a 6-on-2. We won 14-9, but everyone was disappointed with the victory due to the way that the game was played.

Next we beat England and then the Iroquois in the semi-finals to set up another game with Canada for the championship.

We had a team meeting and went over the match-ups. I was going to cover Paul Gait. I think one way or another every lacrosse player models their game after one of the Gait brothers. I had a poster of them next to my bed when I was in high school. For me, a kid from Northfield, Ill., covering Paul Gait in his last game for the world championship, even playing with the flu, I was still excited for the match-up.

Todd Rassas was a three-time All-America defenseman at Notre Dame who played an integral role in helping the U.S. men's lacrosse team win the 2002 International Lacrosse Federation (ILF) Championship in Perth, Australia, serving as team captain. Rassas also works as a Secret Service agent.

We started the game with a three-goal lead. Then Canada made some plays to come back. It was back and forth until Canada pulled ahead by two to end the half. It was the first time this Team USA was trailing, and we were getting a little hesitant.

After regrouping we pulled ahead in the third quarter. Doug Shanahan played out of his mind in the fourth quarter.

Canada realized they were short on time and called a stick check on Mike Powell. Mike's stick was illegal, and then Jimmy Butler (our team stick doctor) countered their move with a stick check on Canada's John Tavares. It was found illegal and since he scored the last goal it was taken off the board. From there we were able to run out the clock and ended up winning 18-15.

At the beginning of this quest for the gold medal we were picked to finish second or third. "Team USA can't win," said the writers. I kept all the articles. I, along with this team, took the challenge. I am happy to say we are the World Champions! Memories of Nicky Polanco in leopard-skin sandals and a red, white and blue head band, as well as the punishment Trevor Tierney had after he couldn't get past the ladies tee on the golf course will be hard memories to forget. I miss sitting on the bus and playing what-if scenarios about the Secret Service with Matt Streibel, Scott Doyle and Ryan Boyle. It was a classy group of guys that I will never forget. I can't indicate how much pride I had I wearing a USA jersey after my 9-11 experience. I hope my World Team experience motivates all those who at one time have been told that they "can't."

Season

Senior Brian Giordano, back for his fourth year as a starter in the Irish midfield, has been tabbed first-team all-Great Western Lacrosse League in each of the last two seasons, and he begins 2005 as a preseason honorable-mention All-America selection by Inside Lacrosse.

Irish Focused For 2005 Season

Talented Notre Dame squad seeks to reclaim position among nation's elite

In 2005, the University of Notre Dame men's lacrosse team will try to parlay a roster of talented players into a return for the program to a place among the nation's elite. The Irish – one of just seven Division I teams to have reached the NCAA Championship 10 times since 1990 – reached a new pinnacle in the growth of the program in 2001, when they ascended to the #2 national ranking during the regular season and then advanced to the semifinals of the NCAA tournament, knocking off Johns Hopkins en route to doing so.

Since that season, Notre Dame has experienced three seasons that featured high points, but all ended in disappointment. In each of the campaigns, the Irish dropped one or more tight games in the final minutes that could have earned them a post-season bid. The task in front of 17th-year head coach Kevin Corrigan is to ensure that the 2005 season turns out differently, and he has a clear sense of the roadmap necessary for the journey.

"We've tried to make some changes, tried to address some things, and tried to get our team in a frame of mind for this year where we are going to do what we think we are capable of," says Corrigan. "We think we have some very good talent, but we proved to ourselves last year that talent is not enough. There has to be a whole range of things you bring to the table – a work ethic, a level of intensity, a level of concentration, a camaraderie, and a sense of mission that you share, from the coaches through the players. All of those things have to come together on game days. So when we can get to the point where we're bringing all that, then our talent will stand up, but we know we have to do all of those things."

This season, the Irish return a total of 17 monogram winners, including six starters, from last year's squad that finished 7-5 and second in the Great Western Lacrosse League with a 4-1 record. Notre Dame just missed the NCAA tournament, despite finishing the season ranked 11th by Inside Lacrosse and 12th by the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association (USILA). That disappointment – as well as those of the two previous years – has provided an added motivation that should benefit the 2005 group.

"I think the biggest difference in our team is just the focus of our players," says Corrigan. "They've come back with a tremendous attitude, from their work ethic on the field to the way they've acted in all aspects of their lives. I think it's changed, because they're very focused on us being successful this year. That is something that really has to be a way of life, in a sense, and not something that you do for two hours every day if you're really committed to it. I think they've taken the commitment to that next level. I think that's going to be reflected in a lot of things. It's already been reflected in our work ethic on the field. It's already been reflected in the way we prepare ourselves every day for what we're doing in the weight room. So I think it's going to show up on game days as well."

Junior Brian Hubschmann, a preseason honorable-mention All-America pick by Inside Lacrosse, has moved from the midfield to attack for the 2005 season.

ATTACK

A year ago, putting the ball in the net was seldom a problem for the Irish, who ranked second in the nation in scoring offense, with 12.50 goals per game. Notre Dame also was tops in Division I in assists per game (7.92), and the Irish return five of their top seven – and three of their top four – scorers from that squad. Leading that group is junior attackman Pat Walsh, who has established himself as one of the top offensive players in the country over the past two seasons. He became the first Irish rookie ever to earn All-America accolades (honorable mention) as a rookie in 2003 and has led the GWLL and ranked among the top 15 in the nation (12th in '03, 7th in '04) in scoring in each of his collegiate seasons. Last year, Walsh was among the 15 nominees (seven attackmen) for the Tewaaraton Trophy, awarded to the top player in college lacrosse. He was tabbed a third-team All-American by the USILA and narrowly missed becoming the first Notre Dame sophomore ever to hit the 100-career-point plateau, ending '04 with 99 (41 G, 58 A).

"I think the biggest thing Pat will add to his game this year is that he now has had the ball on his stick in important situations for us for two years," says Corrigan. "He has played at an extremely high level, and I think he's going to play now with that confidence that he's gained. Pat is a guy who can make plays at a high level, can control the tempo of the game from his position, and does not make a lot of mistakes. That's what a great player can do. I think he is going to have a great year for us, because he continues to work hard."

Despite the loss of last year's other two starting attackmen – Matt Howell and Dan Berger – the Irish do have another starter returning at the position: Brian Hubschmann, who has moved back to his prep position after running on Notre Dame's top midfield in 2004. He was Notre Dame's third-leading scorer in that role (18 G, 11 A, behind Walsh and Howell), as well as a second-team all-GWLL selection. For 2005, Inside Lacrosse has tabbed him preseason honorable mention All-America.

"Brian had a long stick on him most of the time anyway, so I don't think the move to attack is going to be a tremendous difference," says Corrigan. "The biggest difference to him will be moving back behind the cage. So we think we'll be able to get him opportunities from all over. I think he's a terrific offensive player. He has almost unlimited potential: he's big, strong, fast, shoots the ball with both hands. There is not a lot he can't do. The key for him is to do it more consistently. We expect him to have a big year for us."

Replacing Berger as Notre Dame's top creaseman figures to be senior co-captain Jim Morrison, who was earning major minutes in fall ball as a junior, but then missed the entire 2004 season due to injuries. A former walk-on who has ascended to a position of leadership on the Irish, Morrison has seen limited on-field time throughout his career - playing in only five games (four starts in 2003) heading into his final season - but has the potential to be a breakout player for Notre Dame.

"Jim has worked very hard," says Corrigan. "He's a really creative and hard-working player. He's a great ground-ball guy who is intuitive about getting open and getting the ball. And when he is surrounded by people like Pat and Hubbie, I think he's going to get opportunities. So I think he's going to be very good in the crease attack and taking up where Dan Berger left off. He may not shoot the ball as well as Dan, but I think he gets himself open very well, and he's a better ground-ball guy and a better rider. So I think we can gain some things at that position."

Junior midfielder Matt Ryan is one of the many pieces returning from the offensive unit that finished second in the nation in scoring offense (12.50 goals per game) and first in assists per game (7.9) last season.

Notre Dame's other experienced attackman is senior Matt Malakoff, who has been a contributor for the Irish throughout his career. He is one of just five players on the roster who enter this season having appeared in at least 30 collegiate games, and he has started six times, collecting eight goals and 10 assists.

"Matt Malakoff is a guy who has played different roles for us on the attack for each of his four years," says Corrigan. "The thing about Matt is that he has a real strong sense of himself at this point and really knows what he can do, what he can't do, how to put himself into position to make plays, and how to keep himself out of trouble. He's a very cerebral player with very good skills, and I think he's going to be able to play a lot of different roles for us now on the attack. We can play him anywhere down there."

Others in the mix at attack for the Irish will be sophomore Patrick O'Toole and freshmen Dan Scolaro, Sloan Smith, and Alex Wharton.

MIDFIELD

Notre Dame's midfield boasts a bevy of talented players, any number of which could end up earning significant on-field minutes this season due to the roles vacated by graduates Steve Clagett and Owen Mulford, as well as Hubschmann's move to attack. Leading that group again, though, will be senior co-captain Brian Giordano, the most-experienced player on the Irish roster. He will be in his fourth year as a starter for Notre Dame, having piled up 40 goals, 21 assists, and 46 ground balls during his career. A first-team all-GWLL selection in both 2003 and '04, he was named preseason honorable mention All-America by Inside Lacrosse this year. Giordano is an explosive scoring threat who has notched 11 multiple-goal games during his career, including six in the 10 games in which he played last season.

"Brian Giordano is another guy who every year has improved," says Corrigan. "I really think he's ready to have a great year. He's worked hard to make himself into a real scoring threat every time he touches the ball. He's really learned how to put himself in position to do what he does well. He's become an all around middle after being a guy who was very offensively-oriented at the beginning of his career."

Also back is junior Matt Ryan, who has played major roles in each of the last two seasons, moving into a starting role in 2004. He led non-seniors in ground balls, with 39, in 2004 and has 11 goals and 14 assists during his career.

"Matt Ryan is a very good defensive player," says Corrigan. "He's very good with the ball on his stick, and he's learning how to play without the ball as well, which is the last thing for him to add in his game."

Junior Matt Karweck is another veteran who has been a key factor for the Irish over the past two seasons. He was a starter on Notre Dame's first midfield in 2003 before becoming a reserve in 2004, mostly in an offensive role. He has 25 goals and 11 assists in his career, scoring on over 32 percent of his shots.

"Matt Karweck plays very well inside and has worked to increase his shooting range to make himself more effective as a dodger from up top," says Corrigan. "He can invert, as well, having played attack - as well as midfield - in high school. He's a guy we think we can move around a lot and get a lot out of, just like Matt Ryan."

Another junior, Drew Peters, has seen a great deal of time on the field for the Irish already, mostly as a physical defensive middle. He has played in all 26 games over the past two seasons in that role and has tried to develop his game in order to increase his time.

"Drew Peters has played a lot for us in a more limited defensive role in the last couple years," says Corrigan. "He is a big, strong kid, and he has learned how to position himself and dodge and use his size and strength. Also, he has worked extremely hard to become a good shooter. I think he's going to be effective at both ends of the field this year."

Sophomore Bill Liva stepped in immediately in his first collegiate season to contribute for the Irish, and he has an opportunity to do more this year.

"Bill Liva is an extremely smart player, and he played a lot for us last year. You could put Bill anywhere, and he's going to do a pretty good job of it. He knows the game, and he knows how to play. He's tough, and he's tough-minded, and so he's going to play a lot for us. I don't know yet what role he will play, but he's the kind of guy who is willing to do anything we want him to do."

Sophomore Ryan Cunn was impressive upon his arrival on campus last season, and he had earned a spot on Notre Dame's top midfield in fall ball before suffering a season-ending knee injury in an exhibition game. His return could provide an added boost for the Irish.

Season Preview

"Ryan Cunn will certainly challenge for a spot as he comes back from his injury," says Corrigan. "He had some bad luck with that, but he has really worked extremely hard to get himself back in the mix. We're excited to see what he can do this year."

Others who have seen time on the field and will look to up their roles are seniors Colin Fatti and Tyler Kruppenacher and sophomores Lucius Polk and John Greaney, all who were contributors at times last season. Among rookies who could contribute are Anson Fraser, Michael Podgajny, and Sloan Smith.

The faceoff X will see a number of players competing for time. The veterans are seniors Craig Bishko and Frank Matarazzo, who split most of the duty last year. But Notre Dame has not been extremely successful over the past three years in faceoffs, never winning more than 50 percent in a season. Others who figure to be factors are junior Steve Panos, as well as talented rookie Taylor Clagett – the brother of the 2004 graduate and four-year contributor in the Irish midfield.

"I think the great thing about our midfield is I've named all these guys because the reality is each of them is competitive for playing time," says Corrigan. "It's not something where I can write out our lineup right now and say this is what it's going to be. I honestly don't know; it's going to be determined in our preseason. Again that is why it is going to be extremely important for our attitude to be right, because it's going to be extremely competitive. Not everyone is going to play; not everybody can. I think everybody has accepted that, but not accepted that it's not going to be them. That's a great situation for us; everybody's working hard."

DEFENSE

Notre Dame's defensive unit figures to be the biggest question mark, due to the graduation of Mickey Blum and Brennan Creaney, who had combined to start 67 games during their careers. But the Irish have some young, talented players who will have to come through if Notre Dame is to improve upon its effort in 2004, which allowed teams to score 9.25 goals per game. The top returning player is junior D.J. Driscoll, who has turned into one of the top defenseman in the country. After setting an Irish freshman record for ground balls (61) and being the first rookie ever to lead the squad in the category, he stepped into a full-time starting role in 2004. Heading into this season, he is a preseason third-team All-America pick by Inside Lacrosse and the only league defenseman to earn any preseason All-America accolades from the publication.

"I think D.J. is one of the top defensemen in the country," says Corrigan. "He's athletic, he's tough, he's smart. He's so aggressive and just absolutely tenacious that I think he's really going to have a great year. Judging by the way he played this fall, I'll be real surprised if he's not one of the top defensemen in the country. He is just capable of doing everything, and he wants to be a great player, and that's certainly always part of the equation."

Other returnees on defense that saw on-field time a year ago include Joey Rallo and J.R. Stahl, a pair of sophomores. Rallo played in every game but one, mostly in a reserve role (started against Ohio State) and figures to have the potential to step into a starting spot. Stahl saw action in four games and could see an increased role in 2005. Senior Taylor Matthews and junior James Severin also have played themselves into position to compete for spots. In addition, a pair of freshmen, Ross Zimmerman and Sean Dougherty, are expected to vie for playing time on defense. Both are talented players who figure to be a major part of Irish fortunes in the future.

"This is another position where we've got a lot of people vying for playing time," says Corrigan. "We probably have six guys that I think really put themselves in a great position to compete for two spots. So we're going to have some depth there, but we're also going to be a little bit inexperienced. But the fact is that we have athletic, intelligent guys there that are going to be competing every single day just to get in the lineup. I think that is going to serve us well."

Others who will add depth and compete for time will be senior Mike Hagerty, sophomore John Duffy, and freshman Dave Caperna.

Notre Dame's defense does have one other veteran that will be counted on to be a major factor, senior longstick midfielder Chris Richez. He spent his first two seasons as a shortstick middle before moving to the position last season. Richez remains a viable occasional offensive threat (3 G, 2 A in '04), but he also has turned into one of the top longsticks in the GWLL, making great progress in developing in his new role.

"Chris Richez will help with our experience level on that end of the field," says Corrigan. "He has played a ton for us: two years at midfield and then last year as a defensive midfielder with the long stick. So he has a lot of game experience that can really help us."

Junior Brandon Schultheis will be back as a reserve longstick middle again in 2005, while sophomore Brannon Halvorsen has moved from defenseman into that role, as well.

GOAL

Though the Irish defense is not full of veterans, goaltender features one of Notre Dame's most-experienced players, fifth-year senior Stewart Crosland, the lone remaining player from the 2001 Irish squad that reached the national semifinals. Though he did not play behind All-America goalie Kirk Howell that season, he has been a regular since then, taking over as the full-time starter in the final game of 2002 and then starting the next 27 games (current streak heading into this season). Crosland holds a 17-12 career record with an 8.09 goals-against average (third in ND record book) and .619 save percentage (fifth all-time). He was fifth in the nation in save percentage in 2003 (.626) and 11th in '04 (.599), but his numbers suffered last season due to Notre Dame's wide-open style of play. Crosland figures to be a key for this year's squad.

"Stew has had some excellent games in the last two years, and I think he's had some games where he knows he could have played better," says Corrigan. "But that's part of the growth of a goalie. We really think he's mentally now much stronger than he was a couple of years ago. So I think he's going to be terrific in there. He's also a better communicator than he has been, and I think that's going to help us with a younger defensive group. I think just his maturity in the cage is going to be a big boon to us as a defensive unit."

Crosland will be pushed in the cage, though, as rookie Joey Kemp is expected to be a future star in the position, while senior Sean Quigley and junior Daniel Hickey also will compete for time.
