

BOBBY CLARK
Head Men's Soccer Coach
University of Notre Dame

In eight seasons at the helm of Notre Dame soccer, Head Coach Bobby Clark has already left a lasting impression on the direction of the program. The Irish mentor arrived in South Bend in January of 2001, and quickly transformed Notre Dame soccer into one of the nation's Elite. There have been 8 straight NCAA tournament appearances, two sweet sixteen finishes and two elite 8 finishes. This year's team finished the season with a #13 national ranking. Add four Big East Championships and it is clear that Notre Dame has enjoyed eight great years. The staff have earned Big East Coaching Staff of the Year awards in 2001 and 2004 and have already produced six All-Americans and one Scholar All-American Player of the Year. Joseph Lapira, a former Elite Camper, was voted National Player of the Year, by both the NSCAA and also by Soccer America. In the eight years Clark has been head coach, the program has amassed an 106-45-22 record. There is no question that this program is taking a realist aim at collegiate soccer's most coveted prize – a national title.

Success has followed Coach Clark, affectionately known by those in the program as "The Boss", throughout his career in the game that has spanned several decades and has taken him literally all over the globe. The former Scottish international goalkeeper began coaching while playing for Aberdeen FC in the Scottish Premiership. Under the tutelage of coaching legend Alex Ferguson (now the head man at Manchester United), Clark began coaching in the Aberdeen youth system. Once retired from a seventeen year professional playing career, Coach Clark furthered his coaching resume with stints in Africa (Bulawayo Highlanders), Dartmouth College in Hanover, New Hampshire, New Zealand (National Team Coach), and Stanford University in Palo Alto, California, before accepting the challenge of rebuilding the Notre Dame program. Widely considered one of the great teachers in the college game today, Clark continues to bring his passion and enthusiasm with him onto the fields every day.

The impact Coach Clark has had on Notre Dame's summer soccer camp program is yet another success in a storied career. Each of the past eight summers in South Bend, over 500 soccer players have benefited from Clark's teaching and love for the sport. The Notre Dame Day Camps have targeted young players by focusing on sound technical development in a fun environment to instill a joy for playing the game. The Advanced Camp furthers player development with an overnight camp experience that serves as an introduction to the game played at higher levels of competition. The Elite Camp is the finishing piece of the camp program that focuses on preparing 150 competitive players for college soccer. Notre Dame has annually recruited a number of players out of the Elite Camp, and many more have gone on to play for universities all over the country. With the help of the Notre Dame coaching staff, college coaches, foreign professional coaches, and current college players, Coach Clark has put together a camp program that is second to none.
