Bobby Clark Guides Notre Dame Back to National Prominence with Three Consecutive NCAA Tournament Appearances

Bobby Clark

Head Coach

Fourth Season

Dartmouth College '92

Bobby Clark's formula for success and his reputation for assembling winning teams is evident after three full seasons at Notre Dame. The charismatic and affable Irish's leader has guided his teams three consecutive NCAA Championship appearances (a program first) and BIG EAST Championship title during the 2003 season. Clark also witnessed his '03 team rise to #3 in the nation, earn the fifth overall seed in the NCAA Championship and make the program's first appearance in the NCAA Sweet 16.

Since coming to Notre Dame, Clark has engineered a great turnaround. In the two seasons prior to his arrival, the Irish suffered back-to-back losing seasons in 1999 and 2000 with a combined 15-17-5. Under Clark, Notre Dame is an impressive 40-16-7 (.690) since his arrival.

Clark's penchant for developing talent is evident in the fact that Notre Dame has produced at least five all-BIG EAST Conference selections each of the last three seasons - including eight honorees during the '03 campaign. In addition, he has wasted little time in assembling one of the most talented lineups in the program's history. The '04 sophomore class was ranked among the top five in the nation entering school, while the rookie class has been ranked among the top 10 in the nation as well.

Winning has been synonymous with Clark's tenure wherever he has been. His 17-year resume has produced a glossy .688 winning percentage, a figure that ties him for xxx overall among active Division I head coaches entering the '04 campaign. Clark's teams have posted a 193-79-32 mark during his coaching tenure. Prior to becoming Notre Dame's fifth head coach, he had successful coaching stints at Dartmouth and Stanford.

Regarded as one of the premier tacticians of the game, Clark has built a reputation of being a true players' coach; he's an individual who relates easily to the needs of his players both on and off the field.

Poised with one of the most talented teams in Notre Dame men's soccer history, Clark and his staff chose "Making History" as the team motto for the 2003 season. The Irish followed that motto perfectly, claiming the program's second BIG EAST Championship (the first under Clark), rising as high as third in the national rankings, hosting two NCAA Championship matches at Ivy Field (including a Sweet 16 contest) and earning the program's highest-ever seed in the NCAA Championship (fifth overall).

While the 2003 season ended with a tough luck 1-1 tie against Michigan (the Wolverines advanced 4-3 on penalty kicks), Clark has pushed his program to new heights. Notre Dame defeated both teams which appeared in the NCAA Championship game (St. John's, Indiana) during the regular season and have firmly established Notre Dame soccer as a force to reckon with in the nation.

The outstanding season was highlighted by a memorable run through the BIG EAST Championship. The Irish, behind tournament outstanding defensive player GK Chris Sawyer, shut out all three opponents during the championship (2-0 vs. Connecticut, 1-0 vs. Providence, 2-0 vs. St. John's) to claim the program's second conference title and first since 1996.

The Irish program also received numerous individual accolades, including All-America honors for senior F Justin Detter and junior GK Chris Sawyer. Eight Irish players earned all-BIG EAST honors (a school record) while Detter joined classmate Kevin Richards as the first Clark-era Irish players to be drafted into Major League Soccer.

The 2002 season saw Clark lead his team to an impressive 12-6-3 record and spend all but one week ranked in the top-25 (peaking at #5).

The Irish ended the BIG EAST season with a final 6-3-1 mark and finished fourth in the league's final regular-season standings, but lost in the quarterfinals of the conference championship.

For the first time in school history, Notre Dame played host to the first-ever NCAA men's soccer tournament game at Alumni Field in 2002. The Irish advanced to the second round of the championship for just the second time in school history following a 3-1 victory over Akron. During the '02 campaign, Notre Dame defeated four ranked opponents and three top-10 foes. Clark's squad finished the season 20th in the final Soccer America rankings.

Clark wasted little time in bringing the Notre Dame program back into the national forefront in his first season in 2001 as the Irish earned an NCAA tournament berth for the first time since the 1996 campaign. Clark's squad flourished under his guidance and leadership as the Irish registered a 12-7 record, which marked the most successful season in five years.

He earned his sixth coach-of-the-year accolade when he was selected as the BIG EAST Coach of the Year after leading the Irish to a 7-3 conference mark. Notre Dame tied for second in the final regular-season standings and advanced to the semifinals of the conference championship. It marked the most wins and highest finish ever by an Irish team in seven seasons as a league member.

In addition five players earned BIG EAST all-conference accolades, which included two first-team selections (Braun and Detter). Sawyer, a freshman at the time, was named to the 11-member Soccer America All-Freshman Team. Notre Dame also finished 18th in the final NSCAA and Soccer America rankings.

Prior to being named head coach at Notre Dame, Clark spent five seasons at Stanford where he produced the most successful era in the history of the Cardinal program. When he arrived to the Palo Alto, Calif., campus, he inherited a team that had produced consecutive 5-12 campaigns and had not posted a winning record in four years. In his five seasons at Stanford, Clark turned the program around, creating a consistent national powerhouse.

As Director of Soccer, Clark oversaw both the Cardinal men's and women's programs and specifically served as the head coach of the men's program. In his five seasons at the helm of the Cardinal men, Clark compiled a 71-21-12 (.740) record. Clark guided Stanford to the NCAA Tournament each of his last four years (1997-2000), and his 1998 squad was the national runner-up.

His final season with the Cardinal, the 2000 campaign, ranked as one of the most successful in Stanford history. The 18-3-1 record matched the school standard for wins in a season (tying the mark set by his '98 team). The final national rankings of fourth (Soccer America) and sixth (National Soccer Coaches Association of America) qualify as the second-highest ever at Stanford. His teams also spent two weeks ranked number one in the country, marking the first time Stanford had ever been atop a collegiate poll in men's soccer.

In 2000, the Cardinal broke nine school records and tied another, earned individual MVP honors at three in-season tournaments and saw 13 players win all-Pacific10 accolades. Included in that number was Ryan Nelsen, the Pac-10 Player of the Year, as well as the NSCAA/adidas Collegiate Men's Scholar-Athlete of the Year. In NCAA play, Clark's team defeated Cal State Fullerton and Illinois-Chicago before falling in the quarterfinals to SMU.

In his first season at Stanford in 1996, Clark led the Cardinal to a 10-4-4 record, its first winning season since 1992, and was named the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation Mountain Division Coach of the Year. The 1997 campaign was a break-out year for the program as Stanford posted a 13-5-2 record, earned its first MPSF Mountain Division title, its first top-10 ranking and its first trip to the NCAA tournament in five years. Following the 1997 season, Clark was named NSCAA Far West Region Coach of the Year and garnered MPSF Mountain Division Coach-of-the-Year honors for the second consecutive season.

The 1998 season saw Clark direct the best season in the history of Stanford soccer. Not only did the Cardinal win its first NCAA tournament match, it advanced three steps further to the NCAA championship game (after wins against San Jose State, San Diego, Virginia and Maryland), where it fell to Indiana in the title game to finish with a number-two national ranking. The team won a school-record 18 matches, surpassing the mark of 16 wins recorded in 1978. Following the season, senior Jamie Clark (Clark's son) became the first Cardinal to be named an NSCAA first-team All-American.

Clark led Stanford to its third consecutive NCAA appearance in 1999, the sixth visit to the tournament in school history. The Cardinal ended the season with a first-round NCAA loss to Santa Clara; yet with a 12-4-3 overall mark, it finished with double-digit victories for the fourth consecutive year.

Prior to arriving at Stanford, Clark compiled an impressive soccer background as both coach and player. From 1994-96 as head coach of the New Zealand National Team, he produced a 21-12-3 mark while working with the Senior Olympic, Under-20 and Under-17 squads. For his efforts, Clark was awarded the 1995 Jim McCullen Trophy, given by the New Zealand national media to the person who did the most for New Zealand soccer.

Clark began his collegiate coaching career as the head men's soccer coach at Dartmouth from 1985-93. In nine seasons, Clark compiled an 82-42-13 record (.646) and led the Big Green to three Ivy titles (1998, '90 and '92) and a pair of NCAA quarterfinal appearances. His '90 team defeated Vermont and Columbia in NCAA action before falling to eventual NCAA runner-up Rutgers. His '92 squad defeated St. John's and Seton Hall before losing to eventual champion Virginia. Clark's Dartmouth teams were ranked in the top 10 for four consecutive years, and he was twice named the NSCAA Region I Coach of the Year (1990, '92). His '90 team finished eighth in the final Intercollegiate Soccer Coaches Association of America poll.

Along with his international coaching experience in New Zealand, Clark also coached in Africa and in his native Scotland. In Zimbabwe, he was Director of Coaching with the Bulawayo Highlanders in the Zimbabwean Super League for the 1983-84 season. In Scotland, he was the Youth coach with Aberdeen F.C. in the Scottish Premier League. He was also one of the Scottish Football Association's staff coaches.

Prior to coaching, Clark enjoyed a distinguished professional career in the Scottish League. From 1962-82, he made more than 800 first-team appearances, 696 of which were with the Aberdeen Dons from 1965-1982. With the Dons, Clark won the 1970 Scottish Cup, the 1976 League Cup and the 1980 Premier League Championship. Clark, who represented Scotland at every level of professional soccer, was involved in three of Scotland's World Cup campaigns as a player in 1970, 1974 and 1978, contributing to the Scottish squad that advanced to the finals of the 1978 World Cup Tournament in Argentina.

Clark's success in Aberdeen is legendary. In '02, he was honored by the team as one of its top-25 members of all-time.

In two Scottish off-seasons, Clark played professionally for the Washington Whips of the United Soccer Association (1967), and the San Antonio Thunder of the North American Soccer League (1976).

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, Clark graduated from Jordanhill College in 1967. He and his wife Bette, have three children: Tommy, Jennifer and Jamie.

Tommy, a 1992 graduate of Dartmouth College, earned a bachelor's degree in English. He was a regional All-American while playing with the Big Green – and played professional soccer in Zimbabwe, New Zealand and New Mexico. He and his wife are graduates of the Medical School at Dartmouth. He also maintains the website www.grassrootsoccer.org.

Jennifer, a 1994 Dartmouth graduate, served as an assistant for three years to former Stanford women's soccer head coach Steve Swanson. She is currently the women's soccer coach at Claremont McKenna College in Claremont, Calif. – and is married to former Notre Dame assistant men's tennis coach Mike Morgan (he's now the head men's tennis coach at Claremont McKenna). The couple has one child – Tamhas Alexander Morgan – born April of 2002.

The Clark's youngest son, Jamie, graduated from Stanford in '99. A two-time All-American, he played professionally for the MLS San Jose Earthquakes and Raith Rovers in Scotland. Currently, he is an assistant coach at the University of New Mexico.

Bobby Clark was presented with his BIG EAST Coach-of-the-Year award in 2001 by Kevin MacConnell, a member of the league's men's soccer committee. Clark became just the second coach in BIG EAST history to earn the annual award in his first year in the league.

Bobby Clark on ...

philosophy ... Experience over the years has shown me that it is great to have good players. But it is more important to have a good team. Being part of a good team allows players the opportunity to both fulfill their potential and enjoy their sport to the fullest, whether they are a starter, a bench player or practice player.

challenges ... One of the exciting elements of coaching soccer at the collegiate level is the nature of the college structure. With players graduating and leaving the program every year, it forces all coaches to adjust. It is a different team each year because of losing key players, but that is one of the challenges of coaching. Teams are never the same every year. It's continually changing and always a challenge.

Notre Dame ... First of all, I am so lucky to be given the challenge and opportunity to be coaching here. I enjoy a new challenge and that is what was so appealing to me about this situation and what I like most about coming to this University. It has always been a solid program, but it is one of the men's soccer programs in the country that can be truly great. I was in a similar position at Stanford when I took the job there. Notre Dame is a program with so much potential because of the great academic school it is and the tremendous athletic tradition it has. Notre Dame has everything it needs to become one of the truly great soccer programs nationally.

his game/coaching style ... Soccer has to be fun for everyone involved – players and coaches. Practice has to be fun. Players have to enjoy being part of a group; they have to enjoy coming to practice. If players are having fun, then they will more receptive to listening and learning what we are teaching them in practice. If they are not having fun, then it will make learning difficult. Even with conditioning drills, the fun should be in everyone doing it together and getting everyone through it as a team.

defining a successful season ... For me a successful season is being in contention for something at the end of the season. That can mean that if you have a good team, then making the playoffs (in our case the BIG EAST tournament) or getting a bid in the NCAA tournament. But if you are not a good team, you can still be playing for your own goals — the goals you have set for that team. A team can be 1-10, but still be very excited about playing for its own goals. As a coach, you have to have realistic goals for your players, and in turn, your players must be realistic in setting their goals for the season. The key always is to have fun.

his enthusiasm ... As the head coach, it is my responsibility to be enthusiastic and get the players motivated. I've never had a problem with that. Every morning I wake up, I'm excited for the challenges that will present themselves to me on that day. My philosophy is a simple one: if you don't have a passion and excitement for the job, then you shouldn't be doing it.

Mike Avery begins his fifth season as an assistant coach at Notre Dame. He joined the Irish staff as an assistant coach in March of 2000 following three seasons as head men's soccer coach at Cal State University San Bernardino. In addition to his duties with the men's soccer program, he also served as head coach of the women's program for the 1998 and 1999 campaigns.

Avery has been instrumental in guiding Notre Dame to three consecutive seasons with at least 12 wins. The Irish's 40 victories over the last three years are the most over a three season stretch since 1987-88-89. He also has helped elevate Notre Dame's recruiting efforts each of the last four years.

In three campaigns as men's coach at Cal State San Bernardino, Avery led the Coyote program through a successful rebuilding campaign. Avery's '99 squad continued the trend of improving each year under his direction by finishing with an 8-11-1 record. In six seasons as a head men's coach, Avery has compiled a 62-58-5 (.516) mark.

Avery began his coaching career at nearby Bethel College in Mishawaka, Ind., in 1994 when the native of San Jose, Calif., transformed that program into one of the top small college NAIA men's soccer teams. In his final season at the school in 1996, he led a team which had won just three games in the season prior to his arrival to a 17-4-1 mark as the Pilots won the school's first-ever Mid-Central Conference crown. In three seasons at Bethel, his team posted an overall 43-21-2 mark. In Avery's first campaign (1994), the Pilots had a 10-9-1 record and then improved that by six wins the following season as they posted a 16-8-0 ledger. His efforts earned him conference coach-of-the-year honors in both '95 and '96 as well as Great Lakes Region coach-of-the-year accolades.

Avery played from 1986-89 at Westmont College in Santa Barbara, Calif., where he was a two-time honorable mention All-American and four-time all-conference and all-Far West standout for the NAIA school which made three national tournament appearances during his four seasons. In his senior season, he served as team captain on a squad which advanced to the national semifinals.

Born Sept. 19, 1968, he received his degree in physical education in 1990, and following graduation, played professionally both in the United States and abroad for several teams. During a four-year span, he enjoyed stints with Real Santa Barbara, and Askims (Sweden). He also served as a player-coach for the Indiana Invaders.

Avery received his master's degree in kinesiology from Northwestern State in 1994. His wife Carin is the head women's volleyball coach at Valparaiso University. The couple welcomed their first child, Alex Roddy, in November of 2003.

Brian Wiese

Assistant Coach

Fourth Season

Dartmouth College '95

Brian Wiese, who spent five seasons alongside Bobby Clark as an assistant at Stanford University, begins his fourth season as an assistant coach on the Notre Dame staff.

Wiese tutors the Irish goalkeepers. Under his guidance, Notre Dame has registered a team goals against average of under 1.00 each of the last three seasons. Led by All-American Chris Sawyer, Notre Dame posted an impressive 0.67 goals-against average in 2003 with 13 shutouts (Sawyer matched the school record for individual shutouts with 12).

In 2002, the Irish finished with a 0.95 goals against average and posted six shutouts. During the 2001 campaign, Notre Dame registered a 0.98 goals against average. With the help of Wiese, Sawyer ranked fifth nationally in goals against average and was named to the Soccer America All-Freshman Team.

During his tenure in Palo Alto, Calif., Wiese helped build the Cardinal defense into one of the top units in the country with Stanford compiling a 71-21-12 record over five campaigns. In 2000, as a team, Stanford finished first in the nation in goals against average (0.44) and shutout percentage (.727), while Cardinal All-America goalkeeper Adam Zapala finished first nationally with a 0.45 goals against average.

The 1998 campaign saw Stanford advance to the national championship game as the Cardinal finished second nationally in the rankings and posted nine shutouts, while registering a 0.88 goals against average.

Prior to joining the coaching staff at Stanford, Wiese enjoyed a successful collegiate career as a goalkeeper at Dartmouth. He played three seasons for Clark at the Hanover, N.H., school, and from 1991-94, the Albuquerque, New Mexico native was a three-year starter and posted 15 career shutouts. As a sophomore, he led the Big Green to the quarterfinals of the NCAA tournaments, Dartmouth finished with an 11-5-2 record. A three-time All-Ivy League honoree, he was selected as team MVP in 1993 and served as co-captain of the 1994 squad. In addition, he was an Academic All-Ivy League selection in both his junior and senior seasons.

Wiese took a term off from Dartmouth to play in Zimbabwe for the Bulawayo Highlanders before graduating in '95 with a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering. Following graduation, he moved to San Diego, Calif., to coach the Del Mar Tsunami Club team before taking the assistant coaching position at Stanford.

Wiese received his master's degree in Product Design from Stanford in 1998. He holds a Premier Diploma from the National Soccer Coaches Association of America and an "A" license from the United States Soccer Federation.

Born June 6, 1973, he and his wife Becky, also a Dartmouth graduate and a member of the school's track team, are the parents of two children, a daughter, Morgan Anna, and son, Teddy Crockett.
