

Rowing

History

Coxswain Maureen Gibbons and Notre Dame enjoyed a historic 2003-04 campaign as the Irish won their first-ever BIG EAST Rowing Challenge team title. She and the varsity eight crew also placed 11th at the NCAA Championships after earning an at-large bid for just the second time in school history.

Katrina Ten Eyck earned all-Central Region first team honors in her senior season in 2000. She was the first Irish rower to earn all-regional accolades.

Byron V. Kanaley Award

Perhaps the most prestigious honor awarded to Notre Dame student-athletes is the Byron V. Kanaley Award. Presented each year since 1927 at commencement exercises, the Kanaley Awards go to the senior monogram athletes who have been most exemplary as students and leaders.

The awards, selected by the Faculty Board on Athletics, are named in honor of a 1904 Notre Dame graduate who was a member of the baseball team as an undergraduate. Kanaley went on to a successful banking career in Chicago and served the University in the Alumni Association as a lay trustee from 1915 until his death in 1960.

A two-year monogram winner and 2000 graduate, Katrina Ten Eyck has been the lone Irish rower to earn the award. An all-Central Region honoree, she was a Dean's List student who majored in the Program of Liberal Studies.

Women's rowing became Notre Dame's 26th and newest varsity sport during the 1998-99 season.

A long-standing club sport at the University since co-education in the '70s, rowing was granted varsity status in the spring of 1996, along with women's lacrosse. Over the past eight years, rowing has become one of the fastest growing sports at the collegiate level with more than 4,500 participants.

The first rowing team (all male) at Notre Dame was founded in 1964 by a group of students. Women's rowing was established in the spring of 1973, the same year women were admitted into the University. The club team was founded by Frank "Clete" Graham, and first earned national recognition when it won back-to-back titles at the Midwest Sprints in 1973 and 1974, and placed second in the Eastern Sprints in '74.

As a club sport for 25 years, women's rowing experienced tremendous success. Annually, an average of 50 women participated in the school's club program. While it received limited funds from the University for operational costs to maintain its sport, the club was dependent on financial support from alumni and parents to purchase new boats, equipment and uniforms.

Martin Stone, following a successful stint as head coach of the women's rowing team at the U.S. Naval Academy, was named the school's first varsity head coach in the fall of 1997.

Stone added Pam Mork, a rower at Wisconsin, and Kevin Luecke, a coxswain at Northwestern, to his staff in '98. Luecke then left to pursue other opportunities in 2001 and was replaced by another Northwestern rower, Joe Schlosberg.

In six seasons of varsity competition, Stone and his staff have built a solid foundation at Notre Dame. Under Stone, the Irish program has earned national respect and regard.

The 2003-04 campaign was the most successful in school history as the Irish claimed its first-ever BIG EAST Rowing Challenge and tied a championship mark by winning four races as Stone was named the coach of the year. Notre Dame's varsity eight, second varsity eight, varsity four and second varsity four all won gold medals.

The varsity eight boat earned an at-large berth and competed at the NCAA championships. After a 16th-place finish in 2002, the Irish advanced to the semifinals and finished 16th overall.

berth in the NCAAs, Stone appreciates the strides the program has made during his tenure.

"We were very excited with how well we raced at the NCAAs in May," Stone said. "It's really amazing to see how far our program has come in such a short time. To finish 11th at the NCAAs was truly a credit to everyone who has been involved with the program. We've surprised a lot of people with how far our program has come."

In her final collegiate season, Natalie Ladine became the second rower in school history to earn All-America honors from the Collegiate Rowing Coaches Association (CRCA). She also earned all-Central region honors for the second consecutive year. Alice Bartek also garnered all-regional accolades. In addition, Ladine, Katie Chenoweth and Jacqueline Hazen earned CRCA Scholar-Athlete awards.

In its first year of competition, Notre Dame showed that it would become a major force in the sport of rowing. The Notre Dame lightweight eight boat finished the season ranked 12th in the nation after finishing third at the Midwest Championships. The Irish also made great headway in the varsity eight, placing fourth at the Georgetown Invitational, which features the BIG EAST schools that offer rowing. At the same regatta, the novice eight boat placed second and was also second at the Midwest Championships, showing the incredible depth that the program had in only its first year.

In year two, Notre Dame made progress in catching up to the more established programs in the nation. The Irish just missed the grand finals at the Central Region Championships in the varsity eight boat, while the novice eight boat placed third. At the Georgetown Invitational, the second novice eight won a gold medal, winning by over nine seconds. Notre Dame also placed all seven boats in the grand finals of the Midwest Sprints and finished in the top five in six of seven finals at the SIRA Championships.

The Irish also received a number of individual accolades in 1999-2000 as senior Katrina Ten Eyck earned all-Central Region honors, becoming the first Notre Dame rower to earn such dis-tion. Ten Eyck was also invited to the U.S. Rowing Training Center in Chula Vista, Calif., to train with the national team.

Academically, Ten Eyck and sophomore Katherine Burnett were also honored with the National Scholar-Athlete Award and Ten Eyck was one of five winners of the Byron Kanaley Award, the most prestigious honor given to a Notre Dame student-athlete.

The 2000-01 campaign, its third year of competition as a varsity sport, has proved to be the springboard for success the past three years as the Irish achieved its first national ranking in school history.

During that year, Notre Dame won its first varsity eight race of major proportions at the Head of the Elk regatta and was victorious in five of eight during the spring. The Irish were invited to the prestigious San Diego Crew Classic and compete in the Jessop-Whittier Cup. In addition, they finished second at the BIG EAST Championship and fifth at the Central Regions, just missing out on an invitation to the NAAs. Ashlee Warren and Michelle Olsgard earned CRCA all-Central Region honors.

The Irish also had tremendous success off the water as senior Leah Ashe was named the program's first Academic All-American, receiving second-team honors. Also, 24 rowers were named to the BIG EAST Academic All-Star team. Katherine Burnett, Ann Marie Dillhoff, Becky Luckett and Warren won CRCA Scholar-Athlete honors. Luckett and Warren were also named to the US Rowing Collegiate Honor Roll, becoming the first Notre Dame athletes to earn such distinction.

The following year, in 2001-02 Notre Dame improved on the previous season's success when the varsity eight qualified for the 2002 NCAA Rowing Championships in Indianapolis, Ind. - its first invitation to the national regatta. Notre Dame placed 16th at the NCAA meet, but more importantly it provided valuable experience to the rowers who make up the program's future.

The Irish finished the campaign ranked 13th in the nation - after being ranked as high as ninth in the country following a fifth-place finish at the San Diego Crew Classic, defeating such national powerhouses as Virginia, USC, Texas and Oregon State. For the second straight year, Notre Dame also placed second at the BIG EAST Challenge.

The Irish also boasted a program-high four all-Central Region honorees in first-teamers Olsgard and Warren and second-teamers Burnett and Natalie Ladine. Warren also made history, as she became the first rower in Notre Dame lore to earn Collegiate Rowing Coaches Association All-America honors when she was named to the second team.

In the classroom, Notre Dame broke a number of records as six women were named to the CRCA National Scholar-Athlete roster, including Burnett (a three-time winner), Katie Besson, Ladine, Luckett (a two-time winner), Cassie Markstahler and Diane Price. The Irish had 25 student-athletes earn BIG EAST Academic All-Star honors. For his efforts in 2002, Stone was also named one of six finalists for CRCA National Coach of Year honors and was the Central Region Coach of the Year.

The 2002-03 season also saw some record-setting performances to add to the history books as the second varsity four became the first Notre Dame crew to win a gold medal at the Central Regions. Notre Dame also won three gold medals at the '03 BIG EAST Rowing Challenge - the second most in the history of the program - as the second varsity eight and the first and second varsity four were victorious. Notre Dame was also invited to compete in the prestigious Windermere Cup in Seattle. The Irish placed third in the Cup, as over 100,000 people helped the University of Washington celebrate 100 years of rowing.

The Irish also had many award winners in 2003 as Warren earned all-region recognition for the third consecutive season, while Ladine was honored for the second straight year. Warren, Markstahler and Katie Chenoweth earned National Scholar-Athlete accolades, while Warren was named the 2003 BIG EAST/Aéropostale Notre Dame Female Scholar-Athlete of the Year.

Warren also was a semifinalist for an NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship, while Erica Drennen was the Knute Rockne Scholar-Athlete of the Year. Assistant coach Mork also won her first coaching honor as she was one of six finalists for the CRCA National Assistant Coach of the Year and was the Central Region Coach of the Year.

In the fall of 2004, one of the nation's top recruiting classes enrolled at the University. Highlighting the seven-member class is Amanda Polk, who competed in the '04 FISA Junior World Championships.

For the fifth consecutive year in 2005, the BIG EAST Rowing Challenge will be held at Lake Quinsigamond in Worcester, Mass. This year's challenge will be held on Sunday, April 25 and will feature the league's eight schools that have varsity rowing programs — Boston College, Connecticut, Georgetown, Notre Dame, Rutgers, Syracuse, Villanova and West Virginia.

The Irish are the defending champions after claiming their first-ever title in 2004. Notre Dame won four of five races to top second-place Miami (formerly a conference member) by 24 points as the Irish finished with 116 points. The four individual race victories tied Notre Dame with Syracuse's 2002 squad for the most wins at one challenge. In the previous three championships, Irish teams had finished second.

Martin Stone garnered '04 Coach of the Year honors for the first time in his career.
