MICHAEL LOCKSLEY, HEAD COACH

Michael Locksley enters his third season at the University of New Mexico after being named the school's 29th head football coach on Dec. 9, 2009.

Locksley and his staff continue to implement a new system and build New Mexico football into a conference contender. The Lobos return a wealth of talent and welcome a stellar recruiting class in hopes to be a force in the Mountain West Conference.

Before coming to New Mexico, Locksley spent four seasons as the University of Illinois' offensive coordinator and three years as quarterbacks coach. He also spent two seasons (2003-2004) at the University of Florida as the running backs coach and recruiting coordinator under current Illinois head coach Ron Zook, and six seasons (1997-2002) in the same role at the University of Maryland for head coaches Ron Vanderlinden and Ralph Friedgen.

Throughout his career, Locksley has been praised as one of the top recruiters in the country. He was listed among the top-20 recruiters in the nation by Sports Illustrated and was named a top-25 recruiter by Rivals.com while at Illinois. In 2003, he helped Florida assemble the seventh-best recruiting class in the country according to Rivals.com.

Locksley turned Illinois into one of the nation's top offense. The Illini led the Big Ten in rushing in 2006 and 2007, and passing in 2008. The team ranked second in the Big Ten and 19th nationally in total offense in 2008, averaging 439.4 yards per game. Illinois topped 5,000 yards of total offense for the second straight season in 2008.

"We are elated to have Michael Locksley accept the position of head football coach at the University of New Mexico," said Krebs. "He is the total package; a mentor to young men who stresses the importance of being a student and an athlete. He is a coach who has been recognized nationally for being a top recruiter. He brings a wealth of experience to our program from some top-tier institutions."
