“Athletics has always been an important aspect of my life. I realized I wanted to pursue a career in intercollegiate athletics after I stopped playing basketball in high school. The longing to play wasn’t there anymore, but the enthusiasm I had for sports in general was stronger than it had ever been. My desires to work with and give back to others are two reasons I enjoy college athletics and look forward to having a career in the intercollegiate athletic industry.”

“The Athletic Diversity Council Graduate-Assistantship has presented me with an once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to discover different facets in intercollegiate athletics. The skills I have learned will help me achieve my career goal of working in Ticket Operations. I’ve always had a passion for working with people and my experiences in the ticket office here at OU have helped me learn that ticketing is one of the most important aspects of an athletic department. I love the fact that I not only get to work with every sports team, but also with the general public on a regular basis.”
