"Athletics has played a major role in building core values and discipline in my life ever since I was a young child. I want to pursue a career in intercollegiate athletics because it gives me an opportunity to build upon my athletic foundation, as well as pursue a career that I genuinely have a passion for."

"The Athletics Diversity Council Graduate Program is a great opportunity for aspiring young adults to gain practical work experience and build valuable relationships with respected names in intercollegiate athletics. Being a former student athlete, this program allows me to obtain knowledge about the internal aspects of intercollegiate athletics and provides me with resourceful insight from mentors that will prepare me for my future career."
