

STANFORD ALL-AMERICANS

Stanford has a history of consistently producing All-American softball players, with at least one athlete recognized in each of the last 14 seasons. In six of those years, the Cardinal has had a school-record three players honored. Since 1998, 14 players have combined for 29 All-America awards, including 11 first-team selections.

In 1998, just a season after head coach John Rittman took the reins of the program, a trio of juniors - pitcher Marcy Crouch, pitcher Becky Blevins and designated player Michele

Acosta - led Stanford to its first NCAA Tournament and were later recognized as the school's first All-Americans. The next season, Jessica Mendoza arrived on The Farm, and earned the school's inaugural first-team All-America award after hitting .415 with 57 RBI as a rookie. The Stanford left fielder went on to earn three more first-team honors, and became the school's first four-time first-team All-American.

In 2009, Ashley Hansen became the sixth freshman All-American in school history, following in the footsteps of Mendoza (1999), Sorensen (2000), Morris (2003), Michelle Smith (2005) and Alissa Haber (2007).

In 2010, Haber joined Mendoza as Stanford's only four-time All-Americans. Pitcher Dana Sorensen, first baseman Sarah Beeson and outfielder Catalina Morris were three-time All-Americans for the Cardinal. Last season, Hansen joined Olympian Lauren Lappin and Missy Penna as two-time honorees.

In 2012, the Cardinal returns one All-American in Hansen and looks to add to its rich tradition of success.
