The University of North Carolina and Nike extended their agreement for eight more years beginning in July 2002. The agreement provides each varsity team with shoes, apparel, equipment bags and other products. It also provides $100,000 annually to the Chancellor's Academic Enhancement Fund for undergraduate teaching and $100,000 annually to the athletic department to reward Olympic sport programs and coaches for academic and athletic excellence.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA STATEMENT AGAINST GAMBLING

The mission of the Department of Athletics is to sponsor a broad-based athletic program that provides educational and athletic opportunities for young men and women to grow and develop. In keeping with the Department's mission and the University's commitment to educational interests, competitive athletic programs, and integrity in all areas, the Department of Athletics strongly condemns the influence of gambling on intercollegiate athletics.

Student gambling is a significant issue on college campuses. Student-athlete involvement in gambling has produced many tragic situations, both for student-athletes and the universities they represent. Student-athletes often compete in contests that generate interest from those involved in gambling and, possibly, organized crime. If given the opportunity, those interests will not hesitate to exploit the position student-athletes hold on college campuses. As such, the University of North Carolina is firmly opposed to all forms of gambling and bribery related to intercollegiate athletics.

To fulfill its educational obligation, the Athletic Department provides a gambling education program to all its student-athletes and departmental staff members. This statement and the educational program are reflections of the Department's commitment to keeping intercollegiate athletics free from the influences of gambling and its related activities.

The Athletic Department requires its staff members and student-athletes to adhere to NCAA, state and federal laws regarding gambling. In the interest of fair competition and the growth and development of student-athletes, the Department strongly urges its friends and supporters to refrain from gambling/betting on contests involving collegiate competition and to abide by state and federal laws.

IN MEMORY

Burgess McSwain, associate director of the academic support center at the University of North Carolina athletics department, died at the age of 60 on July 9, 2004. McSwain passed away as a result of complications from surgery. She had been battling cancer for several years.

McSwain, a native of Morganton, began academic counseling for student-athletes at Carolina in the early 1960s. For the past 20-plus years, she worked closely with the Tar Heel men's basketball program.

Her responsibilities included teaching, scheduling, registration, structured study halls, recruiting, tutorial services and monitoring progress toward degrees for the student-athletes in those programs.

She is survived by her father, Daniel Murphy, 87, of Chapel Hill.

The Burgess McSwain Fund has been established in her honor. Contributions may be made in care of the UNC Department of Geography, Saunders Hall, Campus Box 3220, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27599-3220.

"Burgess was a devoted teacher and good friend. She was the epitome of a teacher who was dedicated to her students. For more than 20 years she was always here to work with our players, and she worked with them day and night.

"There were many times we'd get back from a road trip at 1 a.m. and Burgess was there waiting for us because one or more of the players had a test in the morning and she wanted them to prepare more. No one associated with Carolina Basketball through the years was loved more than Burgess. We will all miss her very much."

"We don't want to let our grades slip because we feel like we're hurting her," rising senior Melvin Scott said last year. "We're like her children. She's seen so many guys come through here. That's my mom away from home."

• Senior Melvin Scott

"Burgess was completely committed to making sure the players earned a good education. She always put our needs above her own and that's why she meant so much to us."

"Burgess was an integral part of the University and the Carolina Basketball Family. She was concerned about each and every student-athlete in the program. She didn't care about the number of points they scored. Instead, she cared about their lives off the court and, primarily, their academic endeavors. Burgess will truly be missed."

PREVIEWING THE 2004-05 TAR HEELS

The University of North Carolina returns five starters for the second consecutive year and looks to build on a 19-11 record and its first NCAA Tournament appearance in three seasons.

Roy Williams, the winningest active coach by percentage in the country, begins his 17th season as a head coach and second campaign in charge at his alma mater. Williams enters 2004-05 with a 437-112 record, a winning percentage of .796, fifth-highest in college basketball history.

The Tar Heels are led by a trio of seniors – guards Jackie Manuel and Melvin Scott and forward Jawad Williams. This should be the first time in three years that Carolina's starting lineup includes at least one senior on a regular basis.

Carolina also returns the Atlantic Coast Conference's leaders in scoring, rebounds and assists. Juniors Rashad McCants (20.0 points per game), Sean May (9.8 rebounds) and Raymond Felton (7.1 assists) led the ACC last year in those respective statistics. That marked the first time in ACC history a school had three different players lead the league in those categories in one season.

One of the biggest areas in which the Tar Heels must improve is on defense. Carolina's opponents shot 44.4 percent from the floor last year, the highest percentage allowed in Williams' 16 years as a head coach. Each of his last 10 teams at Kansas held their opponents to less than 41 percent from the floor. Carolina allowed teams to shoot 50 percent or better in five games and won only one of those games.

However, the team did show defensive improvement as the Tar Heels held their opponents to less than 50 percent in each of the final 12 games.

"We have to guard people better," says Williams. "Everybody has to work on guarding the basketball better. The kids want to guard, but it is hard work. It has to be a huge emphasis for them. They bought into it well at times last year, but we've got to find ways to do it better."

Williams believes the team must improve in more areas than just defense to match some pre-season forecasts that have the Tar Heels battling for a Top-10 national ranking.

"Everybody's expectations are so much higher just because everybody's back," says Williams. "It doesn't do any good if everybody's back unless they have improved. Hopefully they've adopted more completely an attitude of team first, that the defensive side is the most important side, an attitude of more completely being concerned with the bottom line of the game result, not individual results. Our kids made strides last year, but the improvement has to continue. Not just individual abilities, but a gradual and genuine improvement of the team coming first."

"The name on the front of the jersey is more important than the name on the back. The lack of success for a few years here makes young players look for more individual goals and individual achievement. Our players looked too much for those individual results. We are going to continue to emphasize it every day. The success the Detroit Pistons had, even though it was at another level, where everybody bought into the team concept, will even help."

A TRIO OF SENIORS

Jawad Williams, Manuel and Scott have combined to play in 272 college games and score more than 2,400 career points. They have endured an 8-20 season as freshmen, an NIT appearance and coaching change as sophomores and a second round trip to the NCAA Tournament as juniors.

"I'm looking forward to this season and hoping for a storybook ending," says JAWAD WILLIAMS. "We've been through a lot over the last three years, including eight wins our first year and then a coaching change. If we were to make a run at the national championship, I think that would be one of the great stories at Carolina. But we've got to work hard with everybody playing their part and everybody being accountable for their actions if we want to reach that goal. It will have to be a full team effort."

Williams, a 6-9 forward from Cleveland, Ohio, has scored 1,143 career points. Last year he was off to a strong offensive start, averaging 19.0 points in the first seven games. That included three games in which he scored at least 21 points and he was shooting 56 percent from the floor. However, he suffered three injuries to his head, including a concussion and broken nose, in the next four games, and his offensive production faltered. He averaged 9.5 points in the next 13 games and shot just 41 percent from the floor over his last 22 contests.

Williams finished the season averaging 12.6 points and 5.4 rebounds per game and shot 45.8 percent from the floor. He shot 50 percent from inside the three-point arc (109 for 218), but only 30.5 percent from three-point range (18 for 59).

Williams has scored in double figures in 60 of his 91 games as a Tar Heel, including 10 games with at least 20 points. He also has grabbed 10 or more rebounds eight times in his career. Last year, he pulled down 12 rebounds in December games against Illinois and Wake Forest, but did not reach double figures after the seventh game of the season.

Williams had 18 points in beating Connecticut, 23 in a win over Maryland when he went 13 for 16 from the free throw line, and had a key three-pointer late in the win at NC State.

"We need to work to put Jawad in position to be more suc-successful on offense,” says Coach Williams. “He’s not a true post-up player and last year his shot was not as successful as we would like, so we need to get him the ball in places where he can be more effective. Plus, he has to rebound the ball better for us to be a good team.”

JACKIE MANUEL was one of the most improved players in the ACC, emerging as a fan favorite at the Smith Center because of the energy and effort he brought to the floor.

The 6-5 swing man from West Palm Beach, Fla., was named to the ACC’s All-Defensive Team, Carolina’s first honoree since Brendan Haywood in 2000-01. Manuel was UNC’s defensive player of the game 16 times last year, including both games against Duke when he helped limit sharpshooter J.J. Redick to 6 of 21 from the floor and 3 of 13 from three-point range.

Manuel, improved on offense from his first two years, even though his scoring average actually went from 7.3 points as a sophomore to 6.5 points last season. He shot 55.9 percent from the floor, had 48 offensive rebounds and had 49 assists against just 25 turnovers.

Manuel cut down on his three-point attempts from 72 as a sophomore to 10 and was more inclined to score on slashing drives to the goal. He scored in double figures seven times with a season-high of 15 against Miami (Fla.). He sparked Carolina’s win over Georgia Tech with 12 points in the first half and had a key steal and basket in the NCAA Tournament first round win over Air Force.

“Jackie has worked hard in the spring and summer to improve his shot,” says Coach Williams. “We changed his shot some and he accepted those changes and has worked on it pretty doggone hard. He had some technique issues, but he also was not as confident in games. We charted over 3000 free throws in practice last year and he shot 78 percent, as opposed to 48 percent in games.

“Jackie’s the best defender on our team. He has really good instincts and a toughness about him that allows him to guard people for a long time. His length helps him, also.”

MELVIN SCOTT, a 6-2 guard from Baltimore, Md., has played in 92 games, more than anyone on the roster. He averaged a career-high 9.9 points a game last year, an increase of 3.5 points a game from his first two seasons.

Scott has made 138 three-point baskets in his career, and 94 from inside the arc. He is tied for 10th place in school history in three-pointers made.

He has scored in double figures 29 times, 17 of which came in his junior season when he also had a high of 20 points in a 79-73 win at Wake Forest. Scott struggled somewhat in the final seven games, as he scored just 30 points and went 9 for 43 from the floor (7 for 31 from three-point range) in that span.

His ballhandling continues to improve as he finished the year with 80 assists and 60 turnovers. He had seven assists and just two miscues against UConn and had a 6:1 assist-error ratio in the NCAA Tournament second round versus Texas.

“Melvin shot well overall last year until the last 8-10 games,” says Coach Williams. “We need him to shoot well all year. We also want him to continue to do a better job with the basketball, not turn it over and play better defense.”

AN EXPERIENCED JUNIOR CLASS

Scott played much of last season as the two-guard alongside RAYMOND FELTON. The 6-1 junior from Latta, S.C., has an opportunity to become one of the top point guards in the country. Already, Felton is seventh in ACC history with 6.9 assists per game and ninth in Tar Heel history with 449 assists.

Felton set the single-game Carolina record last year with 18 in the win over George Mason. He went on to lead the ACC and was fifth nationally in assists with 7.1 per game. He was fourth on the team in scoring with 11.5 points per game, shot a team-leading 81.0 percent from the free throw line and played a team-high 34.6 minutes per game.

Felton scored in double figures 19 times with a high of 25 in the home win over Georgia Tech and had 10 or more assists four times. He had an assist-turnover ratio of 2.1 to 1 and had more assists than errors in 26 of the 30 games.

He played perhaps his finest all-around game of the year in the 103-88 win over the Yellow Jackets when he scored 25 points, had seven rebounds and nine assists and just two turnovers.

“Nobody puts as much pressure on himself to play well as Raymond Felton,” says Coach Williams. “Raymond is working hard to develop a more consistent outside shot. That’s one part of his game he wants to improve. I also think his decision-making with the ball will be much more positive for us after a year in our style of play.”

Felton’s assist-error ratio was fifth-best in the ACC and dropped from 2.44 in Carolina’s 19 wins to 1.64 in the losses. He shot 31.2 percent from three-point range (14 of his last 31, .452), but hit clutch threes late in wins at Wake Forest and against Air Force.

his career, fourth-most in Carolina history behind Ed Cota (32), Phil Ford (16) and Kenny Smith (13). This season he should become the fifth Tar Heel to register at least 1,000 points and 500 assists in his career along with Ford, Smith, Cota and Jeff Lebo.

SEAN MAY, a 6-9 power forward/center, led the ACC in offensive rebounds (3.45 per game), defensive rebounds (6.38) and total rebounds (9.8). The Bloomington, Ind., native also was sixth in the ACC in field goal percentage (.460), sixth in blocked shots (1.24) and seventh in scoring (15.2 ppg). He became the first sophomore to lead the ACC in rebounding since Wake Forest's Tim Duncan in 1995.

May played in 29 of Carolina's 30 games, after missing all but 10 games as a freshman with a foot injury. He was second on the team in scoring, reached double figures in scoring 24 times and had an ACC-best 12 double-doubles in points and rebounds.

The second-team All-ACC and second-team ESPN.com All-America selection had 13 or more rebounds six times, including 21 against both Akron and Duke.

May scored 20 or more points six times last year with highs of 28 and 27 in a pair of games against Georgia Tech. He added eight rebounds, four assists, no turnovers, a block and two steals in the win over the Jackets.

His play was another indicator in Carolina's overall success last year – he shot 49.8 percent from the floor in wins and 41.0 percent in the 11 defeats.

"Sean can do some really nice things around the basket," says Coach Williams. "Conditioning is the biggest thing he needs to work on for this coming season. We don't want him to lose weight, just shift it around. Hopefully he will gain more strength and have better stamina. That will help him finish better inside. It's hard to find anyone with better hands. His footwork will improve as we work on his balance."

RASHAD McCANTS, a 6-4 scoring threat from anywhere on the floor, received more votes last year than any other player for the All-ACC Team, earned second- and third-team All-America accolades and was third in the balloting for ACC Player of the Year behind NC State's Julius Hodge and Duke's Chris Duhon.

The Asheville, N.C., native averaged 20.0 points and scored more field goals (216) than any other player in the ACC. He was third in the ACC in field goal percentage (.479), second in three-point accuracy (.408), fourth in three-pointers made per game (2.6) and seventh in steals (1.77 per game).

His scoring (21.6 ppg), field goal percentage (.496), three-point baskets made (3.25) and three-point percentage (.464) all improved in ACC games. He led the league in three-pointers made and three-point accuracy in the 16 ACC regular-season games.

McCants scored in double figures in all but three games and had 17 20-point games (29 for his career). He reached 30 points twice (career-high 31 at Georgia Tech and 30 at home against Clemson, when he tied the UNC record with eight three-pointers).

In one 10-game stretch from January 17 to February 21, he averaged 23.6 points and shot 55.3 percent from the floor and 45 percent from three-point range.

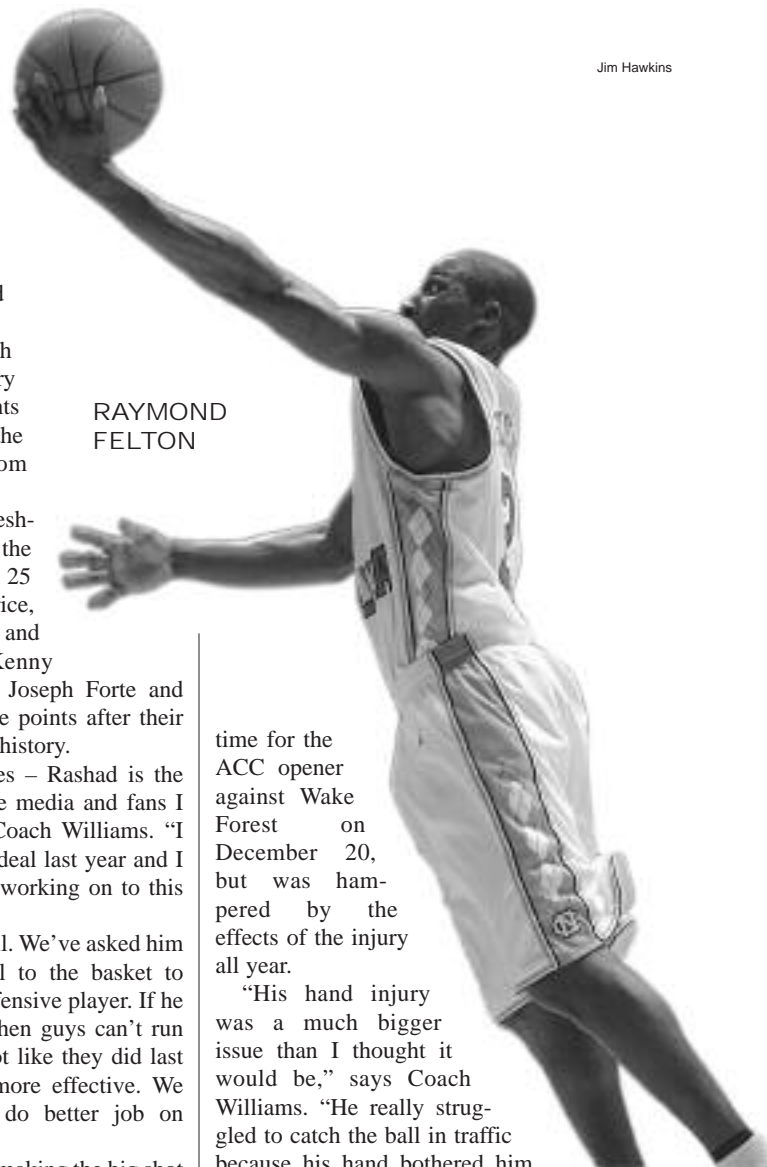

He became the fifth freshman or sophomore to lead the ACC in scoring in the last 25 years (along with Mark Price, Joe Smith, Will Solomon and Jason Williams). Only Kenny Anderson, Jason Williams, Joseph Forte and Joe Smith have scored more points after their sophomore seasons in ACC history.

"I've said it several times – Rashad is the most analyzed player by the media and fans I have ever coached," says Coach Williams. "I thought he matured a great deal last year and I know it is something he is working on to this day.

"He shoots the ball so well. We've asked him to work on taking the ball to the basket to become a more complete offensive player. If he puts the ball on the floor, then guys can't run out on him on his jump shot like they did last year and he can be even more effective. We want him to continue to do better job on defense, as well."

McCants had a knack for making the big shot late in games last year. For example, he had 27 points for the second year in a row against No. 1 ranked Connecticut, including the Tar Heels' final 10 points. His three-pointer with 6.2 seconds to play gave Carolina an 86-83 win. He iced the January 28 win over NC State with a driving basket with 33.5 seconds to play; he hit a three-pointer which tied the February 5 game against Duke with six seconds left in overtime; he hit a pair of three-pointers in the final 5:00 of the win over Maryland; he hit a three-pointer with UNC leading by a point with 3:32 to play in the win over Florida State; and he hit two three-pointers, including one from just in front of the Tar Heel bench, in the last 4:00 in the win at NC State.

Junior forward DAVID NOEL overcame a preseason injury last year to be among the seven-man rotation and should once again stand to see playing time at a number of positions. The 6-6 Durham, N.C., native tore a ligament in his right thumb in a practice collision in October, had corrective surgery and missed the first six games of the season. He returned in time for the ACC opener against Wake Forest on December 20, but was hampered by the effects of the injury all year.

"His hand injury was a much bigger issue than I thought it would be," says Coach Williams. "He really struggled to catch the ball in traffic because his hand bothered him more than people knew."

Noel averaged 5.4 points and 4.9 rebounds in a little more than 21 minutes per contest. He led the team in field goal percentage for the second year in a row at .562, hitting at least 50 percent of the field in 17 of the 24 games in which he played.

As a freshman, Noel averaged 9.3 points and 5.5 rebounds over his last 16 games as he saw significant playing time with May being out of the lineup. Last year, Noel scored in double figures three times. He had eight or more rebounds seven times with a high of 10 in College Park.

"David will once again be asked to guard bigger players," says Coach Williams. "However, I think this year he better understands how to use his speed and quickness that will win out over his lack of size. We need him to bring toughness to our defense and rebounding."

Andrew Wilcox

IMPROVED DEPTH

Five other players return and three newcomers join the roster. The Tar Heels return all but 36 of the 2,464 points they scored a year ago. However, more than 91 percent of the scoring came from six players, thus improved bench productivity and depth is one of the keys to this season.

"It's hard right now to tell about our depth because you never know how young players will adjust to ACC basketball," says Coach Williams. "However, on paper, it looks better having newcomers like MARVIN WILLIAMS, QUENTIN THOMAS and WES MILLER, provided everyone else can stay healthy."

Williams is a 6-9 forward from Bremerton, Wash., Thomas is a 6-3 point guard from Oakland, Calif., and Miller is a 5-11 point guard from Charlotte, N.C., who transferred to Carolina after a year at James Madison. He averaged 4.1 points per game for the Dukes in 2002-03 and sat out last year as a redshirt.

"Quentin and Wes grew up playing the point guard position and that should help us," says Coach Williams. "It allows Raymond to play a few minutes less, but play more effectively."

Other players in the mix up front are 6-9 junior center BYRON SANDERS, 6-11 junior center DAMION GRANT and 6-8 sophomore forward REYSHAWN TERRY.

Sanders has played in 63 career games and made 12 starts, all of which came two years ago when May was injured. He had a season-high seven rebounds last year against Coastal Carolina.

"Byron can help us right now defensively and I think he'll better understand how he can help us on both ends of the court this year," says Coach Williams. "He needs to screen, box out and defend and let his offense take care of itself."

Terry scored 40 points and had 21 rebounds in 25 games as a freshman. He scored 14 against Coastal Carolina and 10 against George Mason in December action. However, his assist-error ratio (4 assists, 16 turnovers) led to limited duty once ACC play began.

"I am hoping Reyshawn will be much more confident after a year of ACC basketball," says Coach Williams. "He has nice tools, but he needs to relax. When he got into games, he often would commit a quick foul or turn the ball over. A lot of that is a result of not being confident."

Grant struggled with tendonitis in his knees and saw action in just three games.

"I am still concerned about our inside scoring," says Coach Williams. "We need an inside threat to establish a proper mix from the outside. We need more of a low post presence. Somebody needs to help us score inside."

Guard JESSE HOLLEY and forward C.J. HOOKER round out the roster. Holley is a 6-3 sophomore from Roselle, N.J., who is on a football grant-in-aid at Carolina. He played in 15 basketball games and had 11 points, three assists and nine rebounds. He saw action as a defensive sparkplug in the ACC Tournament game against Georgia Tech and both NCAA Tournament games.

DAVID NOEL

Hooker, a 6-2 senior from Palmer, Alaska, played two years on the junior varsity before earning a spot on the varsity roster last year. He played in nine games and had four points, six rebounds and three assists.

CHALLENGING SCHEDULE

Carolina once again plays a challenging schedule, including a November appearance in the EA Sports Maui Classic that features Carolina, BYU, Iowa, Louisville, Stanford, Tennessee, Texas and host Chaminade. Games against defending national champion Connecticut, Kentucky and Indiana highlight the rest of the non-conference slate.

One thing is certain – Coach Williams wants to continue to play an up-tempo style.

"We've got to run more consistently for the whole game," says Williams. "We ran in spurts last year – I want us to run consistently from the first moment of the game to the end. It adds so much value if you do because a couple of spurts can make a big difference in the outcome of the game."

"Last year, we didn't stop people enough to get the break going, we were not quick enough with the outlet pass and we did not have enough people getting downcourt. We have to get five guys running to be as effective as we like."
