WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. - The championship matches are set for Monday following Sunday’s semifinals at the 2018 NCAA Division I Tennis Championships being played at the Wake Forest Tennis Complex.

For the first time since 1998, two teammates will meet for the men’s singles championship. Wake Forest, the national team champion, placed Borna Gojo and Petros Chrysochos into the finals. Chrysochos, the No. 4 seed, advanced with a 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 win over top seed Martin Redlicki of UCLA. Gojo, the No. 7 seed, defeated Mississippi State’s Nuno Borges 2-6, 7-5, 6-2.

In 1998, Stanford’s Bob Bryan beat teammate Paul Goldstein 6-3, 6-2 to win the singles title.

In women’s singles, an all-Pepperdine final was avoided as Ole Miss’ Arianne Hartono topped Pepperdine’s Mayer Sherif in a four hour match, 2-6, 7-6 (5), 7-6 (2). Pepperdine’s Ashley Lahey advanced to the finals with a 6-3, 6-3 win over Vanderbilt’s Fernanda Contreras.

In women’s doubles, Oklahoma State’s team of Vladic Babic/Sofia Blanco will meet LSU’s duo of Jessica Golovin/Eden Richardson in Monday’s championship match. Babic/Blanco defeated Ellyse Hamlin/Kaitlyn McCarthy of Duke 6-1, 7-5. Golovin/Richardson moved into the finals with a win over the North Carolina tandem of Alle Sanford/Sara Daavettila by scores of 3-6, 6-4, 10-6.

In men’s doubles, UCLA was attempting to put two doubles teams in the final but managed just one.

Monday’s action begins at noon with the men’s and women’s singles finals, followed by the men’s and women’s doubles finals.
