“Catamount baseball’s winning tradition is unparalleled in WCU Athletics history. Coaches Jim Gudger and Rob Blackburn laid the foundation. Bill Haywood started the championship tradition. Jack Leggett, Keith LeClair, Rodney Hennon and Todd Raleigh pushed Catamount baseball into the national spotlight with more championships, national rankings and NCAA tournaments.

Now, Bobby Moranda wants to take us even farther – 1002 miles to the mecca of college baseball.”

– Steve White (WCU Athletics historian)

“The building of Haywood Field in 1969 and Childress Field in 1977 was accomplished because the University, community, special friends and players – former and active – came together in a common goal. In order to continue WCU’s tradition of championship baseball and take that next step, we need that same kind of spirit and support.”

– Coach Bill Haywood (1969-81)

“I want to encourage you to get involved and contribute to the 1002 Club. Your support will help ensure that WCU baseball and all of its rich tradition continue. Your contribution at any level will help perpetuate the legacy of your Catamount baseball program.”

– Coach Jack Leggett (1983-91)

“Catamount baseball has always done more with less. The 1002 Club is essential to keep Western Carolina on top!”

– Coach Todd Raleigh (2000-07, WCU player 1988-91)

“It’s been said that what an organization or an individual is made of will determine if you “break down” or “break through.” There is only one acceptable choice here! Join me in supporting the 1002 Club to assure a “break through” future for Catamount baseball.”

– Wayne Tolleson (WCU player 1974-78)

“Baseball is a privilege. Respect the game and be passionate enough to follow your dreams. The ‘1002’ mission started with Coach LeClair, and now the 1002 Club will help that dream become reality.”

– Mark DiFelice (Milwaukee Brewers, WCU player 1995-98)

CATAMOUNTS & FRIENDS,

Throughout the 85-year history of Catamount baseball, our program has experienced tremendous growth and success! With 20 SoCon championships and 11 NCAA appearances, it is easy to take pride in a “job well done.” This success is directly related to the quality people who have played and coached for this storied baseball program! As the head baseball coach at WCU, it has been an honor to get to know the former players from the Gudger, Blackburn, Haywood, Leggett, LeClair, Hennon and Raleigh eras. For me, coaching is all about relationships. Winning championships and competing in the NCAA’s is a thrill, and that success continues to be the competitive goal that drives our personnel daily. At its core, college baseball is so much more than a game. It is the vehicle that prepares young men for life’s personal and professional challenges. Catamount baseball has been a critical stop for many fine people who are winning at the “game of life.”

Going forward into the future of WCU baseball, I am excited to launch the 1002 Club, an exclusive baseball booster organization that will allow our program continued success. The “1002” mission statement that started during the Keith LeClair era represents the mileage from Cullowhee to Omaha, Nebraska and the College World Series. The club is being created to help raise the necessary funds to complete the mission and compete in Omaha. One-hundred percent of the contributions to the 1002 Club go toward the WCU baseball program.

The success of the 1002 Club is a crucial step in our march to Omaha. Your valued support is greatly appreciated.

Bobby Moranda, WCU Head Baseball Coach
